77 Planes Bagged Out of Strong Jap Kamikaze Force; Naha 50% Occupied

Guam (Tuesday), May 29 (AP).—American troops made substantial gains on both the east and west coasts of Okinawa yesterday, but a strong Japanese kamikaze aerial assault cost the Navy 1 light unit sunk and 12, including auxiliaries, "lightly to moderately" damaged.

Preliminary reports indicated 77 Japanese aircraft shot down.

Maj. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd's Sixth Division Marines occupied all of rubble-strewn Naha west of the canal which runs between the harbor and the Asato River. This would give the Leathernecks 50 per cent of the city which once housed 66,000 civilians.

Guam (Tuesday), May 29 (U.P.).—U. S. Seventh Air Force fighter planes destroyed or damaged 42 Japanese planes attacking an airfield northeast of Tokyo and Pacific Fleet scouting planes sank or damaged 10 Japanese ships off Korea, Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced today.

Guam (Tuesday), May 29 (AP).—Streams of weary, mud-caked Okinawans, reported struggling south from the Japanese Shuri bastion, today indicated the island's main defense may be cracking under relentless U. S. Tenth Army pressure.

Considerable Japanese troop movements south of Shuri were also reported.

The civilian exodus was observed after American warships and aircraft smashed a Japanese troop concentration in the narrowing Shuri escape corridor Saturday.

The Okinawans, drafted in great numbers by the Japanese for labor battalions, were moving southward in large groups, plodding wearily through mud, knee deep and slippery after eight days of steady rain, endangered by both American and Japanese fire.

Japs Claim Battleship Sunk

New air blows were reported by both sides in raids extending through the Ryukyus and into the Nipponese mainland island of Kyushu, 325 miles north of Okinawa.

Japan's Domei News Agency claimed Kamikaze Corps suicide planes sank one U. S. battleship, two cruisers and three transports in Nakagusuku Bay, on Okinawa's east coast yesterday.

Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz said fleet carried aircraft shot down five Japanese planes north of Okinawa Friday.

The communique reported other carrier-based planes raided airfields and installations in the Sakishima group, south of Okinawa, Saturday. Navy search planes, patrolling north to the southern coast of Honshu, sank two cargo ships and three fishing craft Sunday.

Thunderbolt Fighters Rake Kyushu

Army Thunderbolt fighters, flying from Ryukyu fields, made their first heavy raids on the Japanese mainland Thursday, it was disclosed. They attacked Kyushu airfields, railroads and other targets with bombs, machine guns and rockets.

The Tenth Army soldiers and Marines on Okinawa slipped and crawled through mud, their heavy armor still bogged down, in their fight to break the Japanese hold on the southern end of the island.

Doughboys of Maj. Gen. Archibald V. Arnold's Seventh Division penetrated to the vicinity of Chan,

Three Women In Jury Chosen To Try Medley

96 Pass Through Box; Testimony in Murder Case to Start Today

By Winifred Nelson

Nine men and three women jurors were sworn in yesterday at 4:26 p. m. to hear the first-degree murder case against Joseph D. Medley during proceedings in District Court which lagegd so noticeably that one of the veniremen snoozed briefly during a lull.

A total of 96 prospective jurors filed through the jury box before a necessary number of 12 proved satisfactory to both Government and defense counsel. One of two alternate jurors remains to be sected before the presentation of testimony begins today.

Chief Prosecutor John W. Flynelly then will make opening statements. He is expected to ask the death penalty for Medley, accused of the robbery and slaying of Mrs. Nancy Boyer, March 6.

Many Women Spectat ors

Many women spectators pressed their faces against the windowed door of the courtroom yesterday in the vain hope that the trial might be opened to the public. Justice T. Alan Goldsborough ordered the first-day session to be closed because jurors and witnesses filled all available space.

Medley's piercing, blue-eyed "look"—one of the distinguishing characteristics by which a Washington doctor identified the 44-year-old escaped convict in a St. Louis cocktail lounge—is the main attraction for the feminine contingent.

But the Medley gaze was barely visible to those in the courtroom yesterday, for he gave his full attention to the paper work of checking a list of prospetcive jurors for his legal aides. At one time Medley drew a pair of silver-rimmed spectacles from his breast pocket and, after adjusting them, looked more than ever like a self-assured businessman.

He followed closely identification of those who passed in and out of the jury box, and often was in-

Truman Asks Jobless Pay For U. S. Aides

Seeks $25 Minimum To Tide War Workers Over Reconversion

By Ben W. Gilbert

President Truman yesterday called for emergency action to provide minimum unemployment compensation of $25 a week for 26 weeks a year to tide warworkers over the reconversion period.

In a special message to Congress which also indorsed expansion of the Social Security program, Truman asked that an immediate go-ahead be given to the unemployment compensation phase ahead of other aspects of the program.

Congressional reaction to the message was mixed, indicating another hot fight on the compensation question in the offing.

Chairman Robert Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee said: "We'll look into it of course, but I see no great emergency."

Specifically, Mr. Truman recommended:

Expansion of coverage to provide protectio nto Government workers, employes of smal firms and maritime workers who are not coveredfi with benefits to these groups to be paid entirely by the Federal Government, but administered by the States.

Establishment of the $25 for a 26 weeks' minimum, at least for the worker who has dependents, with GI Bill of Rights unemployment allowance, to discharged servicement, to be increased to $25 a wek from the present $20 figure, with State administration to be continued.

With respect to social security, he had this to say:

"Congress will soon deal with the broader question of extending, expanding and improving our social security program, of which unemployment insurance is a part. Although such improvement is fundamental, Congressional deliberations on the broad issues will take time."

Congressional supporters of expanded social security legislation believe that President Truman

Cut in Cross-River Bus Fare Here Upheld by High Court

The Supreme Court yesterday upheld Interstate Commerce Commission orders reducing bus fares on lines serving the District and Arlington County, Va.

Justice Black delivered the court's 6-3 opinion. Justice Roberts dissented on the ground that the ICC had no jurisdiction of the fares involved. Justices Reed and Douglas dissented in part.

ICC had been requested by the War and Navy Departments to investigate fares paid by the thousands of Government workers employed in various Federal offices in Virginia, most notably the Pentagon where 30,000 persons work. The Commission found that the prevailing 10-cent fare influenced some employes to quit their jobs in the buildings located in Virginia, and its order entailed a reduction of from 1½ cents to 5 cents a trip and relieved Capital Transit riders of paying an extra nickel.

A special three-judge U. S. District Court twice set aside the ICC orders, holding that the commission was without authority in ordering the lesser fares because it had not proved its jurisdiction.

In appealing to the Supreme Court, the Department of Justice said the ICC had found the Virginia buildings constituted the "nerve center of the war effort in this country."

Justice Black, speaking for the majority, said that "under the commision's findings, supported by evidence, it did have power to declare unreasonable and unlawful as it did, and thereafter to prescribe the lawful rate to be charged for the interstate trip. This did not constitute a regulation of intrastate commerce."

U. S. Offers To Be Umpire For Big Five

Stettinius Calls on All To Strive for Unity; Suggests Argentina Turn to Democracy

San Francisco, May 28 (AP).—Secretary of State Stettinius chose for the United States tonight the role of mediator among the major nations, in a five-point declaration of foreign policy which climaxed a report on the United Nations Conference.

In an address punctuated by a blunt warning to Argentina to put democratic principles into practice at home, Stettinius called on Russia, Britain, France and China to join with the United States in reaching an early "common understanding" on such vexing problems as the establishment of a new Polish government.

The speech by the chairman of the United States delegation was prepared for radio delivery from his penthouse apartment atop a San Francisco hotel. In it the secretary laid down these tenets of a foreign policy which, he said, must attain the strength and continuity that has been "so difficult to achieve in the past history of our country":

1. The capping of final military victory with measures to prevent Germany and Japan from ever again waging war.

2. Extension of wartime "collaboration and community of purpose," with the United States serving as mediator among the great powers when their interests conflict.

3. Application to world affairs of the principle of "fair dealing for all peoples and states, large and small."

4. Advancement of world-wide social and economic conditions which "create a climate for peace."

5. Realization that we live in a world where the covereignty of even the most powerful nations is not absolute and "there is no such thing as complete freedom of decision for any nation."

Stettinius said the American delegation had been in daily communication with President Truman and that "his leadership has been essential to our progress."

Interpreis Yalta Pace

Touching on one of the United Nations' Conference's most vital problems, Stettinius gave an American interpretation of the Yalta voting agreement reached by President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin. He said the Crimea proposals required that the Big Five must agree on any enforcement action taken by the proposed World Security Council.

"There would be a similar requirement on action for the peaceful settlement of disputes, except that a party to a dispute must refrain from voting," Stettinius said. "This requirement, however,

Evatt Assails Great-Nation Veto Powers

San Francisco, May 28 (AP).—Australian Foreign Minister Herbert V. Evatt today termed great-nation veto power over peaceful settlement of international disputes, "preposterous," and a "dangerous blot" on a proposed world charter.

The chief of the Australian delegation handed to a press conference a formal statement on the largest issue still confronting the United Nations Conference.

Evatt, replying to questions, said he believed "there is a distinct majority" of conference members in favor of lifting the veto from investigation and peaceful settlements.

Fight "Investigation" Veto

Asked whether Australia would fight on in open conference sessions if the big power veto interpretation does not go far enough, Evatt replied, "We'll make that hurdle when we come to it."

Small powers have been battling the big ones, contending the veto should not extend to investigation and peaceful settlement of disputes.

As an answer to a series of questions the little nations have propounded on how the veto would work, Big Five technical experts agreed today on an interpretation which reportedly will say the great

Supreme Court Recess Put Off Until June 11

Two Score Appeals Await Disposition After Weekly Session

By the Associated Press

The Supreme Court yesterday postponed the start of its summer recess for at least two weeks.

The court previously had set yesterday for ending the term, but nearly two score appeals still awaited decision after the sitting and the tribunal arranged to hold two additional opinion days, next Monday and the following Monday. An announcement said adjournment for the summer would be taken June 11 "unless otherwise ordered."

At yesterday's session, the court:

Announced it would finally hear arguments at the opening of the new term next October on the long-pending question of constitutionality of the "death sentence clause" of the Public Utility Holding Company Act, under which the Securities and Exchange Commission has directed the dissolution of numerous utility combinations.

Stone Now Qualified

The court disclosed in early 1943 that by reason of individual disqualifications of members, it lacked a legal quorum of six to rule on the question. Chief Justice Stone made it known yesterday that he had decided he was eligible to sit in the matter, thus providing a quorum.

Security? Hush, Hush!

'Secret' War Documents Prove As Easy to Get as a Cold

Two Wacs, acting on the orders of a high-ranking Army officer, last week exposed glaring weaknesses in existing Government security regulations. The details of the story read like fiction, but a few red-faced Army officers could testify, that this one really happened.

The actors in this exciting drama are "Colonel X," and two comely Wacs. Colonel X is in a very hush-hush agency which it seems best to call PDQ.

A few weeks ago, Colonel X became skeptical as to the efficiency of security regulations at PDQ. He knew that strictest secrecy was required, for much of the material handled at his agency was very important to the war effort. The colonel decided to check on the security and finally came up with a scheme which seemed both simple and direct.

One day last week Colonel X obtained the services of two Wacs who were stationed at a nearby Army post. Swearing them to secrecy, he told them that he wanted to find out one thing—were the security regulations at PDQ adequate?

The colonel gave them enough money for civilian clothes and arranged hotel accommodations for them in Washington, the latter no mean feat. After a few simple instructions, they were on their own.

Bright and early next morning, the two girls walked out of a downtown hotel and started for PDQ. They boarded a bus already packed with Government workers bound for the same place. Discreet inquiries from some fellow passengers revealed that PDQ was in dire need of workers. The jobs were very secret and fascinating. They couldn't tell what they did, because it was so—well, they just couldn't tell.

Upon alighting from the bus, the Wacs followed the crowd to the main entrance. Formidable, armed guards were carefully checking every person who entered. Everyone had to have a badge, and besides all the badges weren't alike. Some had differently colored borders around the picture of the wearer.

The Wacs, (in sheep clothing), asked one of the guards where they could apply for a job. They gave fictitious names and were issued visitors badges. The guard courteously told them where they would find the employment office.

General Outbreak Is Feared With Both Sides Getting Ready in Damascus

Damascus, May 28 (AP).—Street fighting in the Arab patriot center of Hama tonight spread to Homs, 30 miles away, and Premier Jamil Mardam Bey expressed fear a "general clash" with the French might be near.

Best reports placed casualties in Hama, 150 miles north of here, at more than 200. The only confirmed report of casualties in Homs was the killing of a seven-year-old girl by a Senegalese soldier. Her brother, 15, was wounded.

(Reuters said in a Cairo dispatch that Nokrashy Pasha, Egyptian Prime Minister, had received Jean Lesouyer, French Minister, today and handed him a note for the French government regarding the situation in the Levant. The dispatch said the two men then conferred with Abdul Rahman Azzam Bey, secretary of the General Arab League, and with an official of the Egyptian Ministry of Foreign Affairs.)

French Guns in Action

Shells from French 75's in Homs battered the Saray (government building and knocked out one wall. Today the French had the main street of Homs under continual crossfire and were shooting at anything that moved.

The Syrians ambushed three French armored automobiles and captured all three. Six members of the crews were killed and three wounded.

Strength of the French at Homs and Hama is unknown here but it is believed there are fewer than 300 French and Senegalese troops in either place. They are known to have larger numbers of Syrian Levies, who are considered undependable.

Latest reports had Bedouins moving into Hama from the desert to the east and French Gendarmes occupying the railroad station.

British authorities indicated that should the fighting flame through Syria and Lebanon their Ninth Army units now in training in Syria might be summoned to restore order.

Mardam Bey said "the French fired upon the people of Hama" at dusk Sunday and "the people then attacked the French garrison."

U. S. Urging Restraint By Both Sides in Levant

The State Department said yesterday the United States is "continuing earnestly to urge the French, Lebanese and Syrian governments to refrain from taking any action which might aggravate" the present situation in Lebanon and Syria where injury and loss of life already have occurred.

Joseph C. Grew, acting Secretary of State, expressing "deep regret over the clashes, declared that it was particularly unfortunate that differences between members of the United Nations have resulted in loss of life at a time when they are trying to perfect an international security organization.

He declared the United States was urging the three governments involved to refrain from any action

Second Lieut. Roland G. Watson, one of two District area men reported killed yesterday, died April 13 of wounds suffered in Germany. Before he went overseas, Lieutenant Watson, then a technical sergeant, toured the country with an Army show. A certificate was awarded to him for his assistance with the Fifth War Loan drive in New York.

Capt. David J. Kane, chemical warfare commander who wears a Silver Star, has gone into the Okinawa fight with his foot in a cast. It was shattered last month when a Jap threw a hand grenade at him on Iwo Jima, but Captain Kane, already a veteran of four major battles refused to be stopped by a crushed foot.

Another local man among yesterday's wounded was Lieut. John J. McCarthy who was shot in the head by a Jap sniper on Okinawa. He is still two up on the Nips, however. Last January as Lieutenant McCarthy was leading a field artillery patrol on the Philippines he was warned that three snipers were near. An hour later the "hunt" was over, the Japs had been bagged, and the patrol had resumed its duty. Lieutenant McCarthy's father, Maj. John J. McCarthy, is an army postal inspector stationed at the Pentagon Building.

Senate Rejects Raise for Self, Passes House's

Pay of Bodies Put At Different Levels First Time In History

By James E. Chinn

Senators yesterday flatly refused to vote themselves more money in any form, leaving House members in an exclusive class with a $10,000 a year salary, plus a $2500 drawing account for expenses.

The situation shatters precedent in the American Congress. Never before has there been a difference in the appropriated incomes of members of the Senate and House.

Four times the Senate yesterday rejected attempts to add something to the incomes of its members, either with a plainly labeled pay raise, or in some other guise. Likewise, it turned back, but with a squeaky margin of six votes, a move to deprive the House of the $2500 annual expense allowance it voted for its membership.

Debate Matches Weather

Nearly five hours of debate, matching at times the warm, humid atmosphere which hung over Washington, preceded the action by which the Senate swept aside every attempt designed to help its members meet some of the added wartime expense of living in Washington.

Twice it turned down proposals for a flat 15 per cent, or $1500, pay increase without any strings attached to it. On top of this it shied away from the $2500 expense allowance plan of the House. And, finally, it killed a proposition to overrule an Internal Revenue Bureau decision holding that the home of a member of Congress is in the District for Federal income tax purposes—a plan that would have allowed a deduction for expenses of living here, and saved the Congressmen an estimated $1200 a year.

The battle reached its climax

Income Lie Traps Seller Of 250,000 Lbs. a Week

Morgenthau Reveals Black Market Coup In Asking for 10,000 Men to Hit Evaders

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau charged yesterday that "a Washington gentleman" who sells 250,000 pounds of meat a week through about 175 merchants in the Capital has been charging 6 to 8 cents a pound above ceiling prices on beef and veal, and paid an estimated $400,000 less than he should have paid in income tax for 1944 alone.

The Secretary made the charge in announcing at a press conference that he will ask Congress for 30 to 50 million dollars to hire 10,000 additional field agents to investigate tax evasion cases.

He said a conservative estimate was that the additional men can bring in over a billion dollars in tax money that might not otherwise be obtained.

5000 for Field Work

The 10,000 new employes would include 5000 agents in the field—the need for whom Morgenthau announced last week—and 5000 other desk employes to back them up.

President Truman is backing him in his request for the additional funds, Morgenthau indicated. He said:

"President Truman is fully familiar and sympathetic with what I am doing."

Morgenthau told of two "tremendous" tax violations and "shocking" tax violations that have just been uncovered, one of them the case here. He said that the District meat dealer had "overlooked $400,000 taxes for 1944 alone."

The Internal Revenue Bureau, Morgenthau added, is closing the meat dealer's tax year as of April, 1945, so that he will not have time to spend the money.

Measure Rarely Adopted

Such a drastic measure as closing an individual's tax year has not been taken "for a long time," Morgenthau said, but he declared it is the Treasury's prerogative to do so whenever irregularities are discovered.

The second of the latest big cases of tax evasion, he said, is that of another wholesale meat dealer in Baltimore, who has been selling meat at 10 cents above ceiling prices, according to the Treasury Secretary.

"Sworn testimony against the Baltimore dealer," Morgenthau declared, "shows that he collected $400,000 through black market dealings while he reported a $35,000 net income in the year 1944."

Morgenthau said that the Baltimore dealer dealt extensively throughout the New York City area, obtaining his meat supplies from a Midwest packing company.

Meanwhile, Morgenthau said, public support of the Treasury's campaign to stamp out wartime tax evasions, is welcome, and he expressed gratification for the public's sympathy and aid so far.

"There is great support from the public," the Secretary said. "They want to see these violators prosecuted."

"It is a terrible situation," he told newsmen as he described new cases of tax evasion. "I am shocked to death. The more I go into this thing the more shocking it is."

Egg Shortage Hits Local Restaurants

Local restaurants are "having some trouble" obtaining eggs, Robert J. Wilson, executive secretary of the Washington Restaurant Association, said yesterday.

Wilson attributed the shortage to the wide use of eggs as a substitute for hard-to-get meat, the shortage of chickens and the use of eggs by poultry raisers for incubation rather than for sale.

Army to Give Back British Ghost House

London, May 28 (AP).—The sixteenth century "haunted house" in Hampshire which was occupied by Gen. Omar N. Bradley before the invasion of North Africa and by Gen. George S. Patton before the invasion of France, soon will be returned to the British.

The ancient Elizabethan mansion built at the village of Breamore by John Doddington reverted to the crown when a Doddington heir murdered his mother and was hanged. The present owner is Sir Westrow Hulse.

Mrs. E. G. Dyer, the caretaker's wife, insists Mrs. Doddington's ghost still prowls through the mansion's 70-odd rooms. One particular room, she declares, retains a cold clammy atmosphere despite all efforts to make it comfortable.

The legend did not seem to bother Bradley or Patton, both of whom used the huge ivy-draped building as staff headquarters.

There were many stories about the place, and a favorite prank was to send rookie lieutenants and GIs on inspection tours of the ghost's quarters at night.

The mansion will be returned to the British as soon as German prisoners make some repairs.

Chinese Cut Main Jap Road To South Asia

Chungking, May 28 (AP).—Chinese battle groups ground into Japan's trans-China lifeline to southeast Asia at five points along a vast 850-mile front tonight amid indications the Japanese might be preparing to quit south China.

Such a withdrawal would cut off all overland escape routes for Japanese armies in Burma, Malaya, Thailand and Indo-China and force suicide stands against the Allies.

The reports followed the greatest Chinese victory in months, the recapture of Yungning (Manning), a major Japanese stronghold in south China.

Main Route Cut

Yungning's fall cut the primary overland highway supply route to southeast Asia, and today the Chinese high command said its troops were tearing deeper into the southern end of the 850-mile fighting front.

Veteran troops were spearheading a southern Kwangsi Province offensive under Kwangtung Gen. Chang Fah-Kwei, leader of the old Fourth Nationalist army—"The Ironsides"—which achieved fame in Chinese civil war days.

Fanning out from Yungning, General Chang's forces began to mop up enemy remnants in the vicinity of the sity, 470 miles south of Chungking and 78 miles from Indo-China, and by last night had cleared the north bank of the Si (west river).

Enemy forces which withdrew to the south bank—in the area of the projected Japanese railroad from Liuchow to Indo-China—were being surrounded and attacked, a communique said.

Penetrate Pinyang . . . . . .

Chang's forces also were attacking the west flank of Japan's overland corridor on a 60-mile front north of Yungning and reached the outskirts of Pinyang, 58 miles northeast. Pinyang's capture would consolidate the Chinese hold on the overland highway to Indo-China and reduce Japanese chances of rewinning Yungning.

Ninety miles north of Yungning, the Chinese were attacking the west wall of the Japanese corridor, at another point, striking eastward toward the former big United States air base of Liuchow.

Other Chinese were advancing on Ishan and another 220 miles to the northeast, a third Chinese column pressed toward the former American base of Shaoyang (Poaching) in western Huran provinve. China's American - trained and equipped new sixth Army which fought in Burma was spearheading this drive. These troops were locked in a swaying battle on plateau land near Tantow, 19 miles northwest of Shaoyang.

Reports that the Japanese might be repairing to pull out of south China appeared based on the tendency of Japanese forces in Kwangsi province to contract their lines. Observers warned, however, against over-optimism, pointing out that the Japanese possessed the ability of recapturing Yungning.

Mrs. Lillian Currie, 21, of 520 E st. ne. who was critically injured Sunday in a motorcycle accident, died yesterday at Providence Hospital. Her death brought the number of District traffic deaths this year to 32.

Police said Mrs. Currie was riding on the back of a motocycle operated by her husband, Shipfitter 1/c George Currie. The accident occurred at S. Capitol and Forrester sts, when he lost control of the motorcycle after swerving to avoid hitting an auto at the intersection, according to police.

Mrs. Currie is the mother of a 4-month-old baby. Her husband is stationed at Bellevue, D. C. He will appear at a coroner's inquest at a later date, police said.

An unidentified woman about 65 years old was critically injured yesterday afternoon when she was struck by a taxicab at 18th and P sts. nw. She was taken to Emergency Hospital where she was admitted with head injuries.

Police said she was about 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighed about 150 pounds, had grey hair and blue eyes and was wearing a blue dress with white polka dots and buttons down the front of it, a black straw hat and black oxfords. The taxi, police said, was operated by Herbert S. Mason, Negro, 28, of 1429 57th pl. ne.

Three persons were injured, none of them seriously, when an auto in which they were riding, collided with a lamp post at the triangular intersection at New Hampshire ave. and 16th and U sts. nw. yesterday.

The driver of the car, Edward Yowell, 21, of 2019 Massachusetts ave. nw., was treated at Garfield Hospital for face injuries. The two passengers, Nina Putman, 18, of Hyattsville, Md., and Clarence Radigan, 17, of 1438 B st. se., were treated at Emergency Hospital for minor face injuries.

Trade Convoys Abolished by U. S., Britain

By International News Service

America and Britain announced last night cessation of convoy operations formerly made necessary by German U-boat activity.

The Navy Department made the announcement here, saying no further trade convoys would be sailed in noncombat areas after 8:01 p. m. E. W. T. last night.

This means that ships which have sailed previously in trade convoys in the Atlantic, Mediterranean, North Sea, Caribbean Sea, Red Sea and coastal waters of South America will be operated independently of Anglo-American naval controls.

The Navy said merchant vessels need no longer darken ship at night and that navigation lights may be burned at full brilliancy.

U. S. naval vessels during three years of war escorted 16,760 ships across the Atlantic. Fewer than a score of ships in convoy were lost.

The Seventh, whose southern bulge extends to the east coast south of Yonabaru, was in position to cut the Japanese Shuri escape corridor.

North of Shuri, the Seventy-seventh Infantry Division and First Marine Division continued their frontal pressure on the fortress. Marine observers reported the Japanese blew up 15 to 20 caves, apparently to destroy abandoned supplies.

Marines Cross Asato Again

West of Shuri, the Twentysecond Marine Regiment crossed the Asato River near its month and joined the Fourth Marine Regiment in fighting through the ruins of Naha, Okinawa capital. The Twenty-second Leathernecks advanced 800 yards, almost reaching the west coast. Both regiments are part of the Sixth Marine Division.

American air observers reported Japanese troops maneuvering south of Shuri in large numbers. Between 1000 and 1500 were in the concentration caught by the warship shells and aerial bombs Saturday. Hundreds were killed.

Artillery continued close support of the Americans wherever possible and Brig. Gen. J. R. Sheetz of Leavenworth, Kans., Army Twenty Fourth Corps Artillery Commander, said more than one million rounds had been fired since Okinawa was invaded April 1. This does not include Navy shelling.

The output, he declared, was the largest artillery expenditure in any Pacific campaign and was comparable to some of the largest European artillery actions.

There has been a marked decrease in Japanese artillery firing. It has dropped from 15,000 rounds daily to around 500 rounds. More than 360 Japanese guns have been knocked out.

Solution to Yesterday's Puzzle.

SECURITY

powers can't prevent discussion of any dispute, but must take any positive action unanimously.

May Delay Closing

It was understood the policy statement is being transmitted to London, Paris, Moscow and Chungking for approval by the various governments. It may not be submitted to the conference for several days.

Big Five delegation chiefs have been studying the question of attempting to write into the proposed world charter their definition of when the Big-Five veto power operates. If it is included in the charter, it was said the wind-up of the United Nations Conference may have to be delayed.

Technicians of these nations, who worked on language changes over the weekend, were reported to have made no changes in general principles upon which the delegation chairmen reached a large measure of agreement Saturday night.

Five Problems Remain

As a dozen Conference committees pushed ahead on drafting final details of the Charter for a new international league, these additional problems still had to be disposed of:

1. Should the Security Council have at its call for emergency use against an aggressor, an air force alone, or a mixed contingent of sky, sea and land forces?

2. Should any country which would be called upon to supply armed forces have the right to participate in Council decisions involving the use of its men and equipment?

3. Should the General Assembly have the right to approve or disapprove reports from the Security Council on measures it has adopted or applied in matters involving maintenance of peace and security?

4. Should the proposed new Court of International Justice have compulsory jurisdiction over international league controversies?

5. What provision should be made for opening the Charter to amendment if revision appears necessary later on?

Truman Expected June 6

In addition, Russia is talking of reopening the question of whether the world organization should be able to expel wayward members. The Big Five failed last week to get the two-thirds committee majority necessary to write in an expulsion provision.

Conference commissions, which have to ratify committee decisions before they are handed over to the entire Conference for ultimate approval, are expected to shift into high gear later in the week. Their sessions will be open to the public.

The Conference still is shooting at signing a Charter and adjourning by the middle or end of next week. President Truman, the White House says, will arrive at the Golden Gate "on or about June 6."

Peruvian Proposal Adopted

A Conference committee considering Security Council powers recommended unanimously today that the United Nations high command, the general staff committee which will direct an international police force, be empowered to establish regional subcommittees.

Accepted 24 to 1 was a Peruvian proposal that regional organizations, such as the Pan-American system, be consulted on setting up subcommittees.

The committee also adopted unanimously an amendment by the nation's sponsoring the Conference—China, Britain, Russia and the United States—permitting the Security Council to call for a breathing spell to calm things while it decides what to do about a dispute.

The Council could recommend provisional measures to keep an argument from expanding.

Proposals that the world charter define aggression were turned down, leaving it to the Council to determine whether aggression has been committed.

MEDLEY

cluded in the conferences between the two brothers defending him, Dennis and James K. Hughes.

The majority of the veniremen were excused because they had already formed an opinion from reading accounts of the killing of Mrs. Boyer after an all-night poker party at her Washington apartment.

The next-greatest number were rejected after they expressed opposition to capital punishment. Although the defense attorneys used every one of the 20 peremptory challenges allowed them, the Government used only two of the same number allowed it—the first one to excuse a Justice Department employe of Hollywoodish dimensions who said she did not read newspapers or had never discussed the Medley case previously "because I had other things of a more personal interest to talk about."

Red-Hair Interlude

Only stir during the day came when the defense chalenged red-haired Margaret Riedel, 36, of 4319 Burnes st. se., and brought a call for order from Justice Goldsborough. Medley is under indictment in New Orleans and wanted for investigation in Chicago for "bathtub" murders of a redhead in each of those ctie. Mrs. Boyer had red hair.

A new group of jurors was called into the courtroom late in the afternoon after the defense challenges had exhausted one entire panel, necessitating the reidentification of the case by the Government and the reading of its witness list, containing 116 names and addresses.

JJJustice Goldsboroug expressed an opinion in his admonition to the jurors before adjourning court that the case would be a "protracted one." Government counsel have said the trial would last from 10 days to two weeks.

Prosecutors Fihelly and Daniel B. Maher said they would present witnesses today to tell the order of events beginning with the discovery of Mrs. Moyer's body slumped against the wall of her kitchenette by Mrs. Ida Soulter, 2120 16th st. nw., manager of the apartment house, and Herman Blackwell, Negro houseman.

Jury Members Listed

The 45-year-old Mrs. Boyer, said by police to have been fond of card playing, was killed by two bullets from a .32-caliber revolver, according to District Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, who will also be one of the first witnesses to take the stand.

The members of the jury are Paul Stuffiefield, 25, Negro letter carrier, 1819 H st. ne.; Leland McCarthy, 51, merchandist manager, of 1757 Crestwood dr. nw.; Guy T. Purdy, 41, employe of the Certified Bakery, 23 Ingraham st. nw.; Mrs. Dorothy Douse, 25, housewife, 501 Underwood st. nw.; Chester Crawford, 49, superintendent of the Certified Bakery, 4514 7th st. nw., and George C. Stuart, 23, Red Cross employe, 1452 Fairmont st. nw., and Herman C. Tard, 45, Negro postoffice clerk, 752 Columbia rd. nw.

William F. Tarr, 59, clerk for the Southern Railroad Co., 6415 8th st. nw.; James S. McKee, 58, agent for the Traveler's Insurance Co., 1621 Columbia rd. nw.; Mrs. Mary I. M. Stone, 32, Negro wardmaid at a local hospital, 2000 H st. nw.; Henry R. Magruder, 43, inspector for the D. C. Government, 3028 Vista st. ne.; and Mrs. Frances K. Oehman, 56, Evening Star bookkeeper, 217 14th st. se. The alternate juror is Irwin Abell, 38, Government worker at Bellvue, D. C., 2505 Q st. se. The Government used its one challenge allowed on alternate jurors and the defense has used one of its two challenges.

Christ Child Society To Hold Open House

The Christ Child Society will hold open house Thursday from 3 to 9 p. m. at the settlement house, 608 Massachusetts ave. ne.

The celebration will be in the form of a May festival with programs at 4 and 8 p. m. Miss Mary Merrick, who founded the welfare organization 60 years ago, will be a special guest.

County Airport Hearing Today At Bethesda

Residents of the western suburban area of Montgomery County are expected to jam the Bethesda County Building today at 2 p. m. to voice their views on the proposed airport at Bradley Hills Country Clyub before a public hearing set by State Aviation Commission.

The commission has especially arranged for the hearing in Bethesda rather than in Baltimore for the convenience of county residents and at the request of the Maryland National Park and Planning Commission which has opposed granting of an airport license.

A petition for an airport permit has been filed by John P. Hoberman for National Airways, who has denied violating regulations under a State law which requires that the property for the proposed airport be "conspicuously posted for 30 days." The Park and Planning Commission will present a resolution stating eight reasons why the license should not be granted. The resolution appeared in last Friday's edition of The Post.

Members of the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce and the Montgomery County Aero Club will send delegates to give the organization's opinions on the proposed project.

Blood Quota Missed

Twenty-two persons failed to keep their appointments at the May visit of the Mobile Blood Donor Unit of the Chevy Chase Red Cross branch causing the group to miss its quota of 160 pints, Mrs. C. W. Riggall, chairman announced yesterday.

With 23 first donors there were 148 pints taken. Had those who made appointments notified the branch of their inability to come the quota would have been reached Mrs. Riggall stated.

Seven new names were added to the "Gallon Club." They are Irving Zipple, Mrs. Hortense M. Martin, Miss Dorothy J. Meadows, a Wave from the Naval Hospital, Mrs. Roy Foster, Mrs. David Stinson, Mrs. Robert L. Jarnagin and Miss Goldye Budman.

Making her fourteenth contribution was Mrs. W. J. C. Agnew, wife of Dr. Agnew, USN. Mrs. H. W. Barre gave blood for the twelfth time, Mrs. Harry Peters and Mrs. Elizabeth Strang their eleventh and Mrs. M. O. Williams her tenth.

The next visit of the Mobile Unit will be July 27 at the Women's Club of Chevy Chase. Appointments may be made by calling Mrs. Riggall, Wisconsin 5968 or Mrs. Roger J. Whiteford, Wisconsin 4041.

Women to Hear Langer

Senator William Langer (R.), former Governor of North Dakota, will speak on "The Future of the Republican Party" at a dinner meeting of the Montgomery County Republican Women's Club, Thursday at 7 p. m. at the Bethesda Women's Club.

Mrs. David Baldwin, club president, yesterday announced that other guests will include Senator George Aiken, Vermont; Mrs. Dolly Gann, sister of the late Vice President Charles Curtis, and Louis A. Gravell, president of the newly organized Republican Club of Montgomery County.

Reservations for dinner may be made through today with Mrs. Richard Raymond, Wisconsin 6847. Due to restricted facilities the affair has been limited to 150 dinner guests.

DAR Elects Regent

Mrs. Jeesse W. Nicholson has been elected regent of the Chevy Chase chapter, DAR succeeding Miss Byrd Beelt who organized the chapter a little more than two years ago.

Others elected to serve with Mrs. Nicholson are: Mrs. Frank P. Wilcox, first vice regent; Mrs. Alexander Ashley, second vice regent; Mrs. John Arnold, chaplain; Mrs. John Lauritzen, recording secretary; Mrs. Tressie Shull, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Ross J. Rudd, treasurer; Mrs. Marshall B. Clark, registrar; Mrs. Walter B. McEacheran, historian; Mrs. Louis Maxwell, libarian; and Mrs. Roger J. Whiteford, editor.

STETTINIUS

does not apply to the right of any nation to bring a dispute before the council, and to full discussion of the merits of its case. It applies only when the council makes a decision involving positive action."

Reviewing the events of the conference, Stettinius said that in supporting Argentina's admission, the United States did not give a "blanket indorsement of policies" of the Buenos Aires government.

Given Chance to Improve

With many, he said, this government has "no sympathy." And the secretary added that Argentina is expected to "carry out effectively" the Democratic and peaceful policies of pan-American cooperation written at Mexico City in the Act of Chapultepec. He added:

"We consider that her admission to the San Francisco Conference increases her obligation to do so. We expect the Argentine nation to see that this obligation is fulfilled."

The Soviet and some other delegations had opposed Argentina's admission on the ground that her domestic and foreign policies had been pro-Nazi.

Turning to the Polish situation, Stettinius said it was a matter of deep regret to the United States that the Polish people were not represented here. He cited the Yalta agreement, in saying that the Warsaw government should be reorganized on a broader Democratic basis, with the inclusion of Democratic leaders from Poland, itself, and from Poles abroad.

Stettinius termed "disappointing" the Big-Three negotiations on broadening the Polish governmen, which were broken off because of Moscow's arrest of 16 underground leaders.

Solidarity Main Goal

It is the intention of the United States, he emphasized, to exert all its influence in collaboration with Russia and Great Britain toward fulfillment of the Yalta agreement on Poland.

The primary objective of American foreign policy, Mr. Stettinius stressed, "is to continue and strengthen in the period of peace, that wartime solidarity which has made possible the defeat of Germany. . . .

"This is as true of our relations with the Soviet Union as it is of our relations with Great Britain, China and France. There have been differences between us. There will continue to be differences. But the effectiveness of our wartime collaboration has demonstrated that our differences can be adjusted."

It is the American purpose, Stettinius continued, "to seek constantly to broaden the scope of our agreement and to reach common understanding on those matters where it does not yet exist." He added:

"We have the right to expect the same spirit and the same approach on the part of our great Allies."

On other conference problems, Stettinius made these points:

Trusteeship—the United States stood for a system fostering progress by dependent people toward higher living standards and human rights, "including the right to independence or other form of self government, such as federation—whichever the people of the area may choose."

France—the United States welcomes "the return of France to her rightful place in world affairs" as illustrated by her inclusion among the Big Five of the world organization.

Peace Aims—Continued collaboration with major allies to achieve "the utter destruction of German militarism and nazism; and second, the absolute assurance that Germany shall never again be able to threaten its neighbors or disturb the peace of the world. Policy toward Japan is directed to the same end."

Economic Goals—Preparation of the ecenomic and social basis for peace to help eliminate in advance the causes of another world war a generation hence.

Human Right—Provision for a commission to work out an international bill of rights based on the four freedoms.

Blood Unit Advances Visit To Alexandria

Due to the Memorial Day date, the final visit of the Red Cross mobile blood donor unit to Alexandria for this month wil lbe moved up from Wednesday to today, from 9 a. m. to 1:30 p. m., at the parish hal of Grace Episcopal Church, 207 South Patrick st., it was announced by Mrs. Walter Chase, Alexandria Red Cross blood donor service chairman.

Mrs. Philip Fowler, recruiting chairman, said that on orgnization day, last Wednesday, the chapter was able to reach its quota of 160 pints of blood through splendid cooperation by various civi groups. Today is devoted to contributions from individuals and it is only through their response in volunteering and in keeping appointments already made that the quota can be reached for the final collection of the month.

Mrs. Fowler said the necessity of supporting the project is even greater at the present time, because many blood donor centers throughout the country have been closed, while the District of Columbia center, which is served by Alexandria, is one of 11 remaining open to provide all of the blood plasma and whole blood needed for the wounded overseas.

COURT

Three separate appeals will be heard.

Refused for a second time to reconsider its decision affirming the deat hsentence imposed on Thomas H. Robinson, jr., for the kidnapping of a Louisville society matron. Robinson was convicted under the Lindbergh Kidnap Act for the 1934 abduction of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll. The high court affirmed the death sentence 7 to 2 last March 5.

Ruled that a lower court had properly denied the National Labor Relations Board authority to reconsider a back-pay award. The case involved lead and zinc workers in the Missouri-Kansas-Oklahoma area. After a back-pay award, affirmed by Circuit Court, NLRB said it learned its formula for the award was "grossly inadequate." The Circuit Court declined to modify its decree or permit remand of the case to the board for reconsideration.

Hotel Phone Case

Held that New York hotels might not make service charges on guests' interState telephone calls, citing in this instance a previous holding for Washington hostelries.

Among cases still pending on the court's decision docket are the deportation order against west coast labor leader Harry Bridges, the contested convictions of 24 top officials of the German-American Bund, the legality of state laws regulating the activity of labor unions, asserted violations of the anti-trust act in labor union-anti-trust action against the Asemployer agreements, and the civil sociated Press.

Usually the court disposes of all cases on which arguments have been heard before taking the summer vacation.

Soldier on Way To Doomed Son

Albany, N. Y., May 28 (AP).—Pvt. Robert F. McEvoy was on his way home from Germany today to see his son, Bobby, 2, stricken with leukemia.

"Thank heaven," said Mrs. McEvoy, who has telegraphed President Truman for the return of her husband. "Bobby is pretty good—his voice is still strong—but the doctor said it won't be much longer before he passes on."

SECRET

Our two heroines conveniently got lost, and finally found themselves in the cafeteria. They noticed that many girls would lay aside their outer garments, not removing their precious identification badges. It was a simple matter to choose two badges, but picking out pictures which somewhat resembled them took almost 20 minutes.

The Wacs donned the stolen badges and pocketed their visitor badges. Then they made a tour of all the offices which would admit them with their purple and green badges. Here and there they picked up documents which people had left lying around. They soon found out, however, that a black and violet badge would admit them to any office in PDQ. They talked it over and decided to leave for the day. On their way out they put on their visitor badges and put the stolen badges in their purses.

At the hotel that night the girls were very busily engaged in pasting strips of black and violet paper around the pictures on their stolen badges. They covered them again with cellophone and they were all set.

The next day was a busy one. The two Wacs worked day, swing, and graveyard shifts. They would life some secret documents and make a note of where they got them and what time it was. They covered practically every office at PDQ, and they were amazed at how easy it was to get important war documents, merely by requesting them.

The next day the Wacs turned over all their notes of their pilfering and all the evidence to Colonel X. He was so astounded that he made the Wacs tell him their story twice. A careful examination of the evidence showed that much of the material stamped as secret was hardly that, being greatly overclassified. But there was enough really important stuff picked up to give aid and comfort to the enemy.

Colonel X now had a hot potato on his hands. The very next day things started popping. PDQ employes began scrutinizing the badges of their fellowworkers.

The crimson flush mounting on some very important countenances would make a neon sign look like a fire-fly.

Service Family, Home Razed, Receives Aid

A car full of clothes for the wife of an Army private and their four small children whose home near Colesville, Md., was destroyed by fire Friday, has been given to the needy family by the Montgomery County Red Cross Chapter under the direction of Mrs. PGad Morehouse, chairman of home service.

The clothing an dmoney were taken to the family by the Montgomery County police Sunday, Mrs. Morehouse said. Although the Service Aid Council yesterday appealed for clothing and a dwelling for the family, Mrs. Morehouse said the Red Cross contribution of clothes is all the family will need for some time.

The father is Pvt. Homer F. Tyler, stationed at Fort Bragg, N. C. The children are 5, 3, 2 and three months old.

Having lost all their possessions in the fire caused by an overheated chimney, the family is staying temporarily at the home of Private Tyler's father, J. W. Tyler, a farmer at Colesville, whose house is not large enough for both families.

William F. Carlin, president of the Service Aid Council, organized to help servicemenand their families of Selective Service Board No. 2, Silver Spring, yesterday appealed for a dwelling for Mrs. Tyler and her children. "The rent shouldn't be above $30 a month. This case really deserves quick response," he said.

Covenant-First Retains National Church Designatio

The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America yesterday voted unanimously to extend a contract designating Covenant-First Presbyterian Church here as the national church of the general assembly.

Covenant-First has been designated the national Presbyterian Church for 15 years under a contract which ran out May 24. The new contract extends the designation for 25 years.

The report containing the contract was presented by J. Austin Latimer, an elder of Sixth Presbyterian Church in Washington and a commissioner to the general assembly now meeting in Minneapolis, Minn. The Rev. Dr. Albert J. McCartney is minister of Covenant-First Church, and chairman of the National Capital Presbyterian Commission.

JoJhnson Beats Off Tax Plan

Johnson, however, had been successful earlier in defeating a proposal to make the State whence a member came his home for income tax purposes, and thereby alow him to deduct from tax returns, as do businessmen, legitimate expenses while attending sessions of Congress.

Such a plan, he charged, would discriminate against all Federal employes in Washington who came from the States and maintained a domicile back home. Moreover, he declared, it might be possible under the plan for a member of Congress to escape al ltaxes on income by allowing his expenses to exceed his salary.

Although declining a pay increase for its members, the Senate haised the salary of its page boys from $4 to $5 a day.

He added that during recent months this Government has repeatedly urged France, Lebanon and Syria to make every effort to reach a friendly agreement which would be "fully consistent" with the independence of the latter countries and which would take cognizance of French interests.

Larger Base Increase In Low Grades Studied

PAY BILL: A larger percentage increase in base pay for employes paid up to $2000 is under consideration by members of the House Civil Service Committee. In fact, the War Labor Board has been asked by the subcommittee in charge of the bill to advise it on a plan that would bring this about and still be within the 'Little Steel' formula. The subcommittee, it was learned, also is considering a permanent increase in base pay for Capitol Hill and judicial employes instead of the flat bonus of 23 per cent voted by the Senate. Overtime pay is the most troublesome problem. A majority of the subcommittee are in favor of true overtime instead of straight time as approved by the Senate. However, at least two of the five members insist that the hours of Federal workers be cut back on July 1. The subcommittee may compromise by approving true overtime to become effective JJuly 1, 1946, when it's presumed the hours of most Federal workers will be back to normal. Recommendations are scheduled to be made to the full committee today.

KLUTTZ

STORY: A court official here spent considerable time explaining the history of the American flag to a group of aliens seeking citizenship. His audience was most attentive and the official presumed his lecture was a success. At the conclusion, he asked: "Now, what is it that you always see flying over this city?" There was a silence for a long moment, and then an alien in the front row popped up, blinked his eyes, and replied: "Peejuns."

UNEMPLOYMENT COMPENSATION: In asking Congress to extend it to the three million Federal workers, President Truman apparently rejected an alternative suggestion which would have given them dismissal pay. However, unemployment compensation — $25 weekly for a maximum of 26 weeks —would be of greater benefit to the needy employes. The Administration, it was learned, had considered dismissal pay ranging from $100 to $300 to employes who are discharged. The money, it was argued, could be used by most employes to pay transportation back to their homes. Three hundred dollars would have been given any employe who had served two or more years, and it would scale down to a minimum of $100 for employes with short service. The dismissal pay feature is certain to be revived if the Congress fails to approve the President's sugestion on unemployment compensation. After World War I Federal workers who were discharged had transportation paid back to their homes.

INSECURITY: President Truman emphasized it in Federal employment in his message to Congress. "The absence of protection for Federal employes—in Navy yards, arsenals, and Government offices—is particularly inequitable," he said, "since these workers are subject to risks of unemployment similar to the risks of those who work for private employers." And it's all too true, but it's something that's generally overlooked. In fact, during discussion of the pay bill various members of Congress have expressed the view that the "security" of Federal jobs partly offsets the need of higher salaries. The truth is that more than 2,000,000 of the 3,000,000 Government people have no security whatever. They have appointments for the duration and six months thereafter. Furthermore, they can be terminated at any time. . . . . .

DIARY NOTES: General Accounting Office couldn't be touched by the President in the reorganization plan he asked Congress to enact. GAO is in the legislative branch. The President asked that he be given a free hand to reorganize only the executive agencies. . . . Chairman Ramspeck of the House Civil Service Committee has introduced a bill to protect the disability retirement rights of disabled service men who are former Federal workers . . . Representative Rees of Kansas says there are 200 different leave forms used in Government. He demands that a standardized form be used by all agencies . . . Contract employes aren't covered in the base pay provision of the pay bill . . . Though its appropriation has been cut, Interstate Commerce Commission will not lay off any employes. It has so many vacancies that it has acquired a small surplus of funds.

W. Pierce MacCoy, State's assistant personnel chief, has his own golden rule of personnel administration which is: "Give two pats on the back for every kick in the pants." Complimenting an employe, he says, has never caused a slackening of work. . . . Files in the Patent Office date back to 1600 when English patents were granted by the crown. . . . Night Senior Foreman of the Public Buildings Administration must work a 54-hour week but they are paid for only 48. . . . The Capitol buildings cover 14 acres of floor space and it requires 142 employes to maintain them. . . . Government Services, Inc., is now the name of Welfare and Recreational Association, operators of most Government cafeterias. . . . . .

Regimentation For Farmers Hit at Parley

Hagerstown, Md., May 28 (AP).—Freedom from Government competition in business and a program of abundant production without regimentation when peace returns was urged today by industrial and agricultural keynote speakers at the one-day farm and industry conference here on postwar objectives of business and agriculture.

Hector Lazo, president of Loose-Wiles Biscuit Co., New York, and a member of the committee on cooperation with agriculture of the National Association of Manufacturers, asked that the pattern of postwar taxation be set now "so that we may plan with confidence and with knowledge of where we stand."

Urging that the Government cooperate in the development of markets at home and abroad, and supervise trade pactices to insure fair competition, Lazo said industry is opposed to the Government operation of any part of industry which makes inevitable the operation of all industry by the Government, which would destroy the competitive system.

Dean T. B. Symons of the University of Maryland College of Agriculture said in keynoting the agriculture talks that there is a need for a policy of abundant production rather than scarcity, with a Government price support program only as an emergency measure.

Symons said a high rate of industrial production is basic to the success of agriculture, adding "we do not want regimentation in agriculture or industry. Other postwar aims of Maryland farmers are the development of housing, soil conservation and a rural health program and an assured income for farmers that will provide a standard of living comparable to other productive groups."

Airplane Workers Protest Shutdown For Memorial Day

Baltimore, May 28 (AP).—Union employes of the Eastern Aircraft Company have filed a protest against the impending shutdown of their plant on Memorial Day, terming the Navy-authorized holiday an "ill advised recommendation."

Sidney Katz, secretary-treasurer of the district CIO, speaking for the local No. 239, UAW, of the CIO, asserted today that the shutdown would have a demoralizing effect upon employes who have been urged to keep up aircraft production needed by the Navy. He also pointed out that employes would lose the premium pay awarded through the union - management contract.

Katz said that the Memorial Day shutdown would result in a loss of 20,000 man-hours at the plant.

Protests were sent to Secretary of the Navy James Forrestal, J. A. Krug, chairman of the War Production Board; Lawrence Fenneman, State director of the War Manpower Commission, and George Creighton, manager of the Baltimore WPB.

Third Trial Set For Sept. 10 in Harrison Case

Richmond, Va., May 28 (AP).—Walter Paul Harrison, convicted and sentenced last week to two years in the penitentiary for involuntary manslaughter in his wife's death, will stand trial for the third time on September 10 when he will answer to an indictment charging him with the murder of his six-week-old son, William Edward.

Judge Willis C. Pulliam, of Hustings Court, Part 2, set the date over the protests of the Commonweath attorney who urged that the trial start July 6.

A. Clair Sager, who represented Harrison in the recent trial, asked for the September 10 date on the grounds that he needed time to "recoup his finances."

He said he and Leith Bremner and J. H. Turner had received $320 in subscriptions raised among the employes of Vepco where Harrison formerly worked, but that the trial had cost $2500 so far, an expense shared by Harrison, his family and his attorneys.

He said he would continue to represent Harrison alone because of a "moral obligation," adding that the Commonwealth attorney was conducting a "persecution instead of a prosecution."

The dentist is Maj. Wallace P. Smith, who has been stationed in New Guinea for the last 19 months.

Maxwell Asks Open Hearing On Dismissal

Annapolis, Md., May 28 (AP).—Governor O'Conor had before him today a request from Elmer St. Clair Maxwill, deposed superintendent of the State penal farm at Roxbury, for an open hearing on his recent dismissal.

Maxwill, acting through his attorney, Willis R. Jones, former head of the State board of correction, also asked in a letter to the Governor that the hearings determine "whether there has been efficiency, neglect of duty or misconduct" on the part of certain members of the board of correction.

Protests Recalled

The letter said that "the mere dismissal, without notice, of such an official (as Maxwell) is sufficient in itself to carry a strong suspicion that there is something wrong ifi the department of correction. . . .

"Both Mr. Maxwell and the public are entitled to have the facts made known."

The letter also charged that "improvement and untimely" transfers had been made to the penal farm by the board of correction over protest of Maxwell.

It related that the site of the penal farm had been selected because of large deposits of limestone on the property. It had been planned, the letter continued, that the stone could be quarried and crushed by prisoners for use on State roads.

"Unfortunately, these constructive recommendations came before a board of correction which included at least two members who are heavily interested in the selling of crushed stone to the State," the letter added.

The letter said the limestone deposits were never developed.

Laid to New Program

In announcing Maxwell's dismissal on May 9, Joseph H. A. Rogan, present chairman of the State board of correction, said the board had voted unanimously to dismiss Maxwell as a result of the new reformatory program effective June 1.

Legislation passed by the 1945 General Assembly provides for a new program of rehabilitation for offenders between 16 and 25 at the farm and for a change in its name to the State Reformatory for Males. There is an indeterminate sentence provision in the law.

Maxwell was appointed head of the farm five years ago.

Bay Fishing Industry Faces New Problems

Hampton, Va., May 26 (AP).—Handicapped by a lack of nearby freezing facilities, a shortage of labor and a sharp increase in production costs, the commercial fishing industry of the lower Virginia peninsula is swinging into another summer season.

Specifically, says W. H. Graham, general manager of one of the seven fish distributing plants scattered through Newport News, Hampton and Phoebus, the headache-inducing problems include these:

The Army has taken over the fish freezing plant in Newport News, the biggest in Virginia. Many men have been lost to the armed forces and to war plants. Labor costs have increased 100 per cent in the past five years. Fish shipping boxes that cost 31 cents each five years ago now cost $1.20 each.

The Newport News freezing plant handled some 5,000 boxes of fish weekly. When it was taken over by the Hampton Roads port of embarkation two years ago the distributors were forced to send their fish to freezing plants in Florida and New Jersey because the Norfolk freezing plant, serving distributors on the southern shore of Hampton Roads, could handle only 900 boxes weekly for the peninsula industry.

Labor shortages and the lack of quick freezing facilities prevent the peninsula distributors from competing on an equitable basis with Boston producers in meeting the demand for fillets.

"We have hardly enough labor to unload the boats, much less to fillet the fish," says Graham. "This forces us to offer most of our fish to the fresh fish trade, which on the average makes us sell at lower prices."

2 Die as Truck Dives Off Span

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 28 (AP).—A giant trailer-truck crashed through a small concrete bridge and dropped 50 feet into a ravine last night, killing Todd Smith and J. C. Howard, both of Chattanooga, Tenn.

The accident occurred at Falling Waters, eight miles from Martinsburg, after the truck failed to round a curve.

The truck, owned by the Superservice Trucking Co. was wrecked. State Police said the cab dropped into a deep pool, trapping the men beneath the water.

Rescuers worked four hours to remove the bodies.

Suspect Is Sought In Porch Slaying Of Mother of 5

Abingdon, Va., May 28 (AP).—A widespread search was underway today by southwest Virginia police for a man wanted for questioning in connection with the killing of Mrs. Opal Johnson, 37-year-old mother of five children, at a combination service station-beer establishment on Holston mountain Friday night.

Mrs. Johnson, an employe of the establishment, located about 15 miles northwest of here, was shot through the head on the porch of a cabin which she occupied next to the service station.

Commonwealth's Attorney Roby Thompson of Washington County said that a man, whom he did not identify, had been seen with Mrs. Johnson at the establishment Friday night just before the shooting.

Thompson said that Mrs. F. L. Pennington, wife of the operator of the place, stated that Mrs. Johnson went to the cabin to get some clothes. Later, Mrs. Pennington said she looked out of the window and saw th ewoman lying on the porch, a bullet wound from a small calibre weapon in her head. She died in a hospital here without regaining consciousness.

Hunt Intensified For Second Victim Of Skiff Mishap

Baltimore, May 19 (AP).—The search for the body of Jane Hoffman, 19-year-old Third Service Command employe, was intensified today following the finding of the body of Randolph Dashiell of Richmond, Va., her companion in a sailing skiff which was found capsized in the Chesapeake Bay 10 days ago.

A Coast Guard patrol boat found Dashiell's body on the beach at Miller's Island, at the head of the bay, yesterday. He was 21, a graduate of St. Christopher's School, Richmond, and had attended the University of Virginia. At the time of his death he was on special duty with the Army in Baltimore.

Relatives and friends told authorities that the two had gone sailing May 18 in a small skiff, expecting to be home in a few hours. Their boat was found overturned the next day off Love Point. A violent windstorm had swept that area of the bay the night before.

Lee County, Va., Votes Today on Dry Referendum

St. Charles, Va., May 28 (AP).—Spirited campaigns are being conducted by both the wets and the drys prior to the wet-dry referendum which will take place in Lee County tomorrow.

Loud speakers are blaring, speaking programs are being held by the drys and a quieter, but none the less ardent, effort is being made by the wets—all in setting forth their side of the question of whether or not the sale of alcoholic beverages shall continue in the county.

Following an attempt which began nearly a year ago with the filing of petitions asking a vote on the prohibition question, the voting tomorrow was ordered by Circuit Judge George Morton. The Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals refused to grant a petition of prohibition asked by Richard Carter.

BARNABY

By Crockett Johnson

My mother didn't like one of the pictures in the last Captain Bloodbath comic . . . The one where Salamipuss, the black market crook, happens to fall into a big meat grinder in a bologna factory and they show him coming out the other end—
But that was the best part.
But she didn't like it. So, instead, she bought me this book. And it's even better.
Let's see it.
The wicked stepmother makes the father take the kids out in the woods and lose them so they'll starve or the wolves will—
Gosh, look! The Witch is going to cook them in the hot oven. And—

Charlemagne's Coffin Returned To Aachen Church

Aachen, May 28 (U.P.).—The golden, bejewelled coffin containing the bones of Charlemagne was returned to Aachen Saturday in a U. S. Army truck after having been removed from the Aachen Cathedral in 1939 for safekeeping.

The casket's last resting place was at Siegen, east of Cologne.

By midafternoon Sunday, Aachen's much-damaged cathedral was jammed with over 700 persons awaiting official announcement that the remains of their patron saint had been returned. The choir sang "The Song of Charlemagne," rendered only on state occasions.

Three New Ones Peep Over a Near Horizon; Notes of the Theater

NOT QUITE SO HECTIC this week as last in the matter of first-run films moving onto the downtown screens. As opposed to five openings last midweek and weekend, there will be only three, come Thursday.

Dorothy McGuire

Tomorrow, just to get it over with as the most imminent change. "The Picture of Dorian Gray" will renew its F st. interest, on the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater.

Next day, at the Capitol, Tallulah Bankhead, William Eythe, Ann Baxter and Charles Coburn, supported by one of Director Ernst Lubitsch's hand-picked casts, will tweak the interest of lovers of Mr. Lubitsch's particular brand of "touchy" comedy in "A Royal Scandal," a provocative business based on the life of Catherine the Great. The stage bill will be headlined by the versatile and highly engaging Ann Corio, already a familiar figure on the Washington stage, but not the Capitol's.

Thursday morning, at RKO-Keith's, Johnny Weissmuller and Johnny Sheffield, impersonating his robust little offspring, will be demonstrating what went on with "Tarzan and the Amazons."

For the Earle Theater's new week, also beginning Thursday, Pat O'Brien, George Murphy and Carole Landis will divert the burghers in a mystery-comedy bearing the inspired title of "Having Wonderful Crime," which probably will arouse no more interest than the fact that the stage goings-on will be dominated by Barry Wood and Patsy Kelly as coheadliners in a week of personal appearances.

As was practically a foregone conclusion, both "Roughly Speaking," at the Metropolitan, and "Diamond Horseshoe," at the Palace, will be barging into second weeks, which, if it matters, will be beginning Thursday and Wednesday, respectively.

While it is still a couple of weeks away from the District Line, "The Enchanted Cottage," previewed yesterday morning, it is entitled to preliminary mention as an impending attraction worthy of eager anticipation. As we were remarking no longer ago than yesterday, this subject was made as a silent picture back yonder in 1924. Lest it be feared by those with long memories that the current production will turn out to be merely a carbon copy of its predecessor, wired for sound, it deserves to be said that Producer Harriet Parsons and Director John Cromwiel have rendered RKO-Radio virtually a new romance depicting in terms of gentleness and charm the transfiguring power of love. While the basis of the original has been retained, new characters have been added and altogether an imaginative story of the last war has been given especial timeliness and force in the present. Robert Young, Dorothy McGuire and Herbert Marshall give what will impress many as flawless performances.

Two war bond prizes of $100 each—one contributed by the Motion Picture Theater Owners of the District; the other, personally, by Fred S. Kogod, chairman of the industry's participation in the Mighty Seventh War Loan Drive in the Washington area—will be awarded the Washington theater managers who compile the best and second-best bond-selling records for the total period of the war loan campaign, April 1 through June 30. The equally valuable second-place award is brought about by the fact that one theater already seems to have a strangle-hold on first place by having even this early exceeded its quota by some 500 per cent. Supplementary bond prizes of $50 and $25 also have been set up by the MPTOA for two winners in each of the 11 areas into which the District of Columbia has been divided. Just a little added incentive and something for the boys to shoot at.

See Them Yourself

For the first time anywhere, it says here, and for the benefit of those who know the various types only as a series of alphabetical-numerical designations, a lineup of America's proudest fighting planes will be put on display today and tomorrow, when the Army Air Forces "Airmada" will be made available for inspection by Washington war bond buyers.

The "Airmada" will be grounded at the National Airport and will consist of a B-29, B-24, B-25, C-47, P-38, P-47, P-51 and an AT-6.

The purchase of a $25 war bond at any theatre in the District will entitle the buyer to inspect the interiors of these deadly fortresses and fighter planes, within the bounds of security and the limitations of war secrets.

Tomorrow at 4:30 p. m., bond purchasers also will be privileged to witness the christening of two hospital ships—one Army and one Navy—by Mrs. Harry S. Truman, wife of the President. This event will be accorded full newsreel coverage and probably made the subject of a national broadcast.

Dots and Dashes

Jake Biben, manager of Kogod and Burka's Princess Theater; George J. Miller, manager of Lichtman's Republic, and Harry March, sr., manager of Louis Bernheimer's Village, have been awarded bond prizes of $100, $50 and $25, respectively, for best sales records in the "Mighty Seventh" over the period from April 1 to May 13 . . . Quotas, in order, were $500, $25,000 and $34,000—so the boys sold $25,000, $40,000 and $43,000 . . . Honorable mentions went to Lloyd Wineland of the Fairlawn Theater, and Charles Demma of the Apex . . . Added attraction at the Earle, beginning Thursday, will be the Warner Brothers two-reel "Navy Nurse," with Andrea King, Marjorie Riordan, Warren Douglas, Paul Brook and Robert Shayne heading the cast . . . Just as you might have known—all Warner neighborhood theaters will be giving special holiday matinees tomorrow . . . Doors open at 12:30 p. m.; first performance at 1 . . . Earle, Metropolitan and Central theaters, downtown, scheduled as usual . . . On May 31, weather permitting—June 1 if not—an outdoor performance of "The Tempest" will be given on the Nabraska Avenue campus at American University as the annual Shakespearean production in memory of Will Hutchins . . . Director Mary Frances Miller has assembled an able cast, who will appear in costumes being supplied from its collection by the Shakespeare Society of Washington.

Decision to Hold Quisling to Aug. 25 May Be Appealed

Oslo, May 28 (U.P.).—Vidkun Quisling, Norway's No. 1 traitor, may appeal a Norwegian court's decision to hold him until August 25 and probably will attempt to shift blame for the misdeeds with which he is charged to Josef Terboven, the late Nazi commissar of Norway, it was reported today.

Terboven and Wilhelm Beidess, SS chief for Norway, killed themselves on May 9.

Detaining Quisling until August 25 would give the state a good chance to prepare a full case against him.

Two lawyers who knew Quisling well before he turned traitor said they believed he has suffered a mental breakdown. One said it seemed obvious Quisling "has convinced himself he has done no wrong and still envisions himself as a rightful head of state who is being punished unjustly."

Reliable sources estimate that Norway will bring to trial as many as 20,000 of the estimated 40,000 supporters which Quisling was believed to have had in Norway.

Alexandrians Plan to Honor Gen. Spaatz

Arrangements for a victory celebration and reception in honor of Gen. Carl A. Spaatz of 206 Duke st., Alexandria, senior American air commander in Europe who was present at the German surrender in Rheims, will be outlined tonight at a civic meeting called by the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce at the Virginia Electric and Power Co. auditorium, 117 South Washington st., Alexander, beginning at 8 o'clock.

Martin E. Greene, business manager of the Chamber, said that Mrs. Spaatz has been informed of the plan to fete her husband, an Alexandrian by adoption, but that no announcement has been made as to the probable date of the general's return. Greene has also conferred concerning military aspects of the celebration with Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, commanding general of nearby Fort Belvoir, who was at the United States Military Academy at the same time General Spaatz was a cadet, being graduated a year ahead of the air leader.

Tonight's meeting will be attended by representatives of civic clubs and city officials when the complete reception committee will be named. Committee appointments announced yesterday by Greene include the following:

Mayor William T. Wilkins, general chairman; City Manager Carl Budwesky, City Engineer C. Luckett Watkins, all o fthe councilmen from the six wards, the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce headed by Charles M. Jones, president; Robert G. Whitton, administrator of the Alexandria Hospital; John W. Tulloch, member of the Alexandria School Board; and Mrs. William Moor Kabler of The Post staff, daughter of Brig. Gen. William H. Holcombe who is a classmate of General Spaatz from West Point in the class of 1914.

General and Mrs. Spaatz purchased their Duke st. home in Alexandria, believed to have been built more than a century and a half ago in the heart of the old section, during the summer of 1941 and after having it restored in keeping with the architecture, moved in one week before the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor. They had planned it as their home when the general was retired from active service.

Mrs. Spaatz has taken an active part in the civic and social life of Alexandria, and is a member of the speakers bureau of the Alexandria Red Cross chapter, a volunteer in the chapter thrift shop and has assisted with projects including the war loan drives, Army Emergency Relief, Community Chest, and other welfare efforts. Among her Washington activities, she is a patron of the National Symphony Orchestra and was among the wives of Air Corps officers assisting with Music for the Services.

She and General Spaatz have three daughters, Mrs. Emmett Burdell Gresham, whose husband, an officer in the Air Corps, survived a crash in Italy when his escort fighter plane plunged in flames on an island off the north coast of Italy and he managed to rejoin the Americans after escaping from the Germans; Miss Katherine Harrison Spaatz who has been in London and France with the Red Cross mobile club service; and Miss Carla Wallace Spaatz who attends St. Agnes School in Alexandria.

Wed 55 Years Arlingtonians Celebrate

"We worked hard for what we've got, and now we are sitting back and enjoyingg it."

That's how Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Merritt summed up 55 years of married life, the anniversary of which they are celebratingg today.

In their home at 3927 N. Glebe rd., Arlington, the couple joked with each other as they prepared to pose for an anniversary picture. Mrs. Merritt, born Lucy Marcey 75 years ago (and "proud of my age"), said she "wanted to tell everything." There was a lot to tell.

The couple was married on May 29, 1890, in the old St. John's Episcopal Church in Washington. "Times were hard then," said Mrs. Merritt. "Quarters were harder to find then than $10 bills are now."

The Merritts started their first home in what is now Country Club Hills in Arlington shortly after their marriage, with $37. His first job was that of painting Lee Mansion.

Raised Dahlias as Business

Next, and with the full cooperation and aid of his wife, Mr. Merritt turned to growing dahlias. Mrs. Merritt proudly recounted how theirs were the first dahlias for sale in Arlington County, and how at one time they were growing 48 varieties of the flower. "We used to cut from eight to twelve thousand dahlias a day," Mrs. Merritt said.

Their nurseries were so famed that President Warren G. Harding used to come down from a nearby country club and walk through the dahlia patches. "He would cut a flower here and there," said Mrs. Merritt, "but he never would cut long stems. Said he didn't want to destroy buds."

President and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson also were visitors to the Merritt's dahlia gardens. "They'd come along the road, with the Secret Service men behind them, and would toot the horn until I'd look up," Mrs. Merritt said. "Even after President Wilson died, Mrs. Wilson would come out to see our flowers."

Sold Ferns Also

Next, the couple gathered ferns and shipped them off to New York. They went in for boxwood shrubs, and planted many around the Lincoln Memorial. When World War II came along, Mrs. Merritt took in roomers because of the housing shortage.

"They're just like children to me," she said.

Now, the couple is resting. "We've seen hard times, but we've never asked for help," Mrs. Merritt summed up. "We got ours the hard way; but I think it's the best way.

"Anniversary celebrations? Why we had that Saturday night. My husband read about Memorial Day exercises on Sunday; since Memorial Day is May 30, we naturally assumed Saturday was May 29, so we had a few people in. Just shows you can't believe what you read in the papers."

$12,000,000 Approved To Aid Flooded Areas

Congres voted 12 million dollars yesterday for emergency flood control work and aid to farmers whose crops and property were damaged by overflows.

The Senate agreed with House amendments and sent the measure to the White House. The House knocked out a proviso that a 15-million-dollar fund in the second deficiency appropriation act of 1943 also be made available to the Secretary of Agriculture for loans and grants to farmers affected by floods and storms in 1944 and this year.

Favor Given Truman Choice for Attorney

The Senate Judiciary Committee yesterday approved President Truman's nomination of Sam M. Wear to succeed Maurice M. Milligan as U. S. Attorney for the Western District of Missouri.

Miligan is the attorney who prosecuted and sent to jail Tom Pendergast, the man who sponsored Mr. Truman to be a United States Senator.

Attorney General Francis Biddle, whose resignation was accepted by Truman last week, had favored reappointment of Milligan, but Mr. Truman, before becoming President, had said he did not want Milligan reappointed.

Departmentalization

One of several reasons why the reorganization of our governmental machinery undertaken in 1939 remained incomplete was the restraints which Congress wrote into the act. It withheld from the President authority to create new departments. At the same time Congress made no efforts of its own to bring into being major administrative units to manage in an orderly fashion vast new operations which it had set in motion. As a result, we acquired the Federal Works and Federal Security Agencies, which ought to be departments with full representation in the Cabinet but are not. The best the President could do under the circumstances was to have them function as departments do while maintaining the disguise of another name.

This mistake ought not to be repeated in passing the new reorganization bill requested by President Truman. If agencies are to be appropriately grouped into departments, it is first necessary to create departments for all major spheres of governmental activity. Senator Aiken takes note of this point by suggesting four new departments to be headed by Cabinet officers. Two of these would absorb Federal Security and Federal Works. The other two would be Departments of Transportation and Communication and of Banking and Insurance.

Care must be exercised to avoid the creation of too many departments for an obvious reason. The President would not be able to supervise their operations. One of the strongest arguments for departmentalization of any institution the size of the United States Government is that it brings the administrative task of the top officials to more manageable proportions. That purpose would be defeated, of course, if departments were created indiscriminately. But when departmentalization is used to centralize administrative activities in each major field, such as social welfare or transportation and communications, the effect is greatly to relieve the burden on the President.

Congress may wish to decide for itself what new departments shall be added. The important thing is to have the decision made somewhere and thus discourage the creation of pseudo-departments. Congress may also decide to write various reorganization principles into the law. That would be preferable, in our opinion to the wholesale exemption of specific agencies proposed by Representative Manasco in his bill introduced in response to the President's request. The act might specify that whenever a so-called independent commission is merged into a department, its quasi-judicial functions should be vested in a separate board which would not be subject to dictation from the department head. By this means it could preserve all the advantages of independent judgment in the handling of quasi-judicial cases and at the same time separate the prosecuting and judging functions now illogically vested in the same group of officials.

One other feature of the Manasco bill should be condemned from the beginning. It is the plan to allow one house of Congress to upset a reorganization plan put into effect by the President. The result, in some instances, would be to let one house defeat the will of the other house and the President. That would be no more democratic than the present two-thirds rule in treaty-making. Congress must, of course, have the last word on issues of national policy including reorganization of the Executive branch. But let Congress speak in such matters, not merely a segment of it.

Ways Of The Censor

Not long ago one of our major allies in the war against Germany denounced a neutrality treaty which had been in force between her and one of our principal enemies in the Pacific war. All that we know of the relationship between these two countries is what we read in the papers and hear on the radio. This relationship is not, of course, wholly without popular interest; yet we feel constrained to discuss it only in the most cautious terms because of a directive, or memorandum, issued at the time of the treaty denunciation by the Office of Censorship warning us that speculations or statements on the subject, "however erroneous they might prove to be," might have the gravest consequences. "Whether such a speculation or prediction were true or false," the Censorship memorandum stated, "the military interest of the United States would be damaged and the war's sacrifice of American life might be prolonged." This directive is still decidedly in force—so much so that a confidential reminder of it has recently come to editors and broadcasters from the Censorship Director.

We presume, however, that promotion of the sale of War Bonds cannot be considered in any sense a menace to the lives of American soldiers and seamen. And it is exclusively in this connection, therefore, that we quote an excerpt from an address on the Seventh War Loan delivered over a national network Monday night by the commanding general of the Army Ground Forces, Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell:

> No one can tell what action Russia might take once she gets her house in order, but if she decides to make war on Japan, I do not think there will be any immediate military sensations. It must be remembered that Japan has a huge force in Manchuria, and this army will serve for a time to immobilize whatever organization the Reds will be able to concentrate in easternmost Siberia. American equipment is going to the Chinese, and even if Russia enters the war with Japan, there still will be a big job for us.

Well, of course, this may be so or it may not be so, and we do not care to go beyond the observation that General Stilwell is rather widely considered to be an authority on the subject about which he was speaking—which, of course, was War Bonds. It is an undeniable fact that we are at war with one of the countries mentioned by General Stilwell and that another of the countries to which he referred in his cautious military fashion is not at war (so far as we know) with the country with which we are at war. In these circumstances, anything can happen. Our considered conclusion, therefore, is that every American ought to buy as many War Bonds as possible.

Mr. Stettinius' Speech

Secretary Stettinius' interim progress report on the San Francisco Conference will be welcomed as an effort to make the proceedings at the Golden Gate clear and understandable. No conference in our memory has been at once so overcovered and so underreported. The result is that many readers who followed the initial reports avidly now seem to have lost their reading appetite. The main trouble came from the flock of scribes who call themselves "saloon reporters." They tried to make the Conference a kind of carnival of cafe society. Mr. Molotov, for instance, must have entertained some doubt as to our seriousness as a nation when he found himself confronted with the question as to whether vodka was pronounced wodka. What has also dulled enthusiasm is the wealth of detail on the Conference work—detail which testifies to reportorial virtuosity but which leaves the average newspaper reader uninterested. It would have been a pity to allow this situation to remain uncorrected, and Secretary Stettinius was well advised to issue his report. His simple report on the interim accomplishments of the Conference may reawaken interest in it.

From the beginning there was never any question that a charter would emerge out of this Conference, that, in other words, the Conference would be a success. It had a single task which was mandated by the world's public opinion. Unlike the peace conference in Paris 26 years ago, this Conference is not concerned with treaties of peace, but only with a constitution for the United Nations. Thus there has not been any occasion to quarrel about spoils. The argument has been over formulas, and though the search for these formulas has been responsible for more refined hairsplitting than any Philadelphia lawyer could think of, there has been a lot of give and take by all participants. Right now the big nations are on the spot on the subject of the veto power which is reserved to them under the Dumbarton Oaks plan. It is therefore in order to offer the reminder that the big nations have been anything but stubborn. Far from holding the Dumbarton Oaks proposals as inviolable, they have loyally held to their pledge at Yalta that the plan was only the fruit of "informal conversations," the basis, that is, for improvement by the Conference as a whole. Already about 100 amendments to the Dumbarton Oaks plan have been entertained and acted upon. The charter, indeed, will be much better looking than seemed possible when the Conference assembled.

Secretary Stettinius in making his report simple has been somewhat elliptical. He leaves the impression, for instance, that the strategic pinpoints we need in the Pacific will all come under the trusteeship system. That is not altogether true. According to the last statement of our position, some of them will be trusteed, and others won't be. He meets with some boldness the criticism over the entry of Argentina. He does this by condemning "many" of Argentina's policies. But he avoids the point that we violated the agreement at Yalta by admitting Argentina. And his argument that the welcome to the Farrell-Peron regime is one way of getting that regime to be well-behaved is neither logical nor in accord with fact. The news from Buenos Aires seems more and more to record the jailing of tried and true friends of democracy and the United States. As the Inter-American of yesterday reports, the entry of Argentina has "strengthened [the regime's] position enormously."

It is ironical in these circumstances to hear Secretary Stettinius say that "we steadfastly adhere to those principles of morality and decency which were the basis of our foreign policy under the leadership of Franklin Roosevelt and Cordell Hull." However, the Secretary's review is otherwise exemplary. The 49 nations at San Francisco all have approached their task from the standpoint of maintaining absolute sovereignty unimpaired, but this is merely a response to the mandate of public opinion, and Secretary Stettinius holds up a warning finger that no world organization can flourish on such terms. It will be an uneasy alliance as long as national sovereignty is the god. "We must realize," says the Secretary, very truly, "that we live in a world where the sovereignty of no nation, not even the most powerful, is absolute." Also to be remembered in San Francisco as well as outside are two other wise comments of his. The five great nations, he says, are in San Francisco not to conspire for war, but to form an organization for peace, and the best way of organizing peace and the most immediate task of the peacemakers is "to prepare the economic and social basis for peace." The world will be saved only by functional machinery which reclaims it from the ravages of war.

Alien Spouses

We owe amends to Representative Ed Gossett of Texas for an assertion in an editorial on Saturday that "he does not intend to have any German or Italian girls admitted to the fair land." So far as we know, Mr. Gossett is quite correct in saying that "no statement ever made by me is subject to such interpretation." As he himself put it, "I am advocating and have introduced a bill to exclude from this country persons who actively served in the armed forces of any nation while such nation was at war with America." This is undoubtedly quite different, and we regret the misinterpretation of his view.

Nevertheless the effect of this attitude and of his unwillingness to admit any white woman who may have married American Negro soldiers was to hamstring Representative Dickstein's sensible proposal to facilitate admission to this country of aliens who married American servicemen or servicewomen overseas. We do not suppose that there can be any considerable number of Wacs or Waves who have married enemy soldiers or any great number of our Negro troops who have married white foreigners.

We share Mr. Gossett's opposition to "legislation which might encourage promiscuous foreign marriages," but do not in the least see that Mr. Dickstein's bill would do anything of the sort. It would simply enable our service personnel who had married aliens to bring their spouses home without going through the State Department's abracadabra over visas. The individual human hopes entailed in this ought not to be blocked by chauvinism or racism.

Penal Reform

The "Georgia chain gang"—once the symbol of American brutality in dealing with convicts—is no longer in existence. It was abolished on October 6, 1943, by the Georgia General Assembly as part of a comprehensive revision of penal administration in the State initiated by Gov. Ellis Arnall. Since that date, there has been 100 per cent cooperation on the part of other Governors throughout the Nation in granting extradition of prisoners apprehended while on escape from Georgia prisons and public work camps. Apparently there is no longer any basis for the allegation, still advanced occasionally by escaped convicts, that they are subject to mistreatment in Georgia institutions. The Nation, as well as the State, can find satisfaction in the reform.

Some of the prohibitions contained in the new Georgia code afford useful reminders of the benighted conditions we permitted not so long ago in a land that likes to think of itself as socially advanced. All forms of shackles, manacles, picks, leg irons and chains are now barred in Georgia. The whipping of prison inmates is now made specifically unlawful. Juvenile first offenders must now be segregated from hardened, vicious criminals. There is an ancient moral in this—that when we shudder at the motes in eyes abroad, we had better remain on the watch for beams in our eyes at home. Governor Arnall is to be congratulated upon another admirable phase in the record of progressive administration which he is writing in one of the great forward-looking States of the South.

Unexpected Bottlenecks

Anticipated shortages of cotton and rayon tire cord may become an important retarding factor in the reconversion of the automobile industry. For tire cord inventories are low and replacement demands for cars and trucks are extremely heavy. Judging from the present outlook, therefore, tire manufacturers will have to ration their output quite severely and automobile manufacturers may have to scale their production programs accordingly. In this particular instance labor shortages are the major obstacle to increased tire cord production. But those labor shortages are largely the result of shifts of workers to better-paying jobs. Thus behind the immediate lack of balance in the various kinds of materials required to turn out new automobiles lie other miscalculations and mistakes of policy that have come to light when it is too late to correct them.

In the months ahead we shall doubtless encounter many unexpected bottlenecks and be increasingly impressed with the difficulties that arise under any system of planned production in a highly developed complex industrial society. We cannot afford to relinquish governmental controls or dispense with planning during the transition period, because conditions do not yet permit of a return to a freely functioning private economy. But the contrast between the difficulties of a calculated adjustment of supply to demand and the adjustments that result from the free play of markets conveys a lesson that is easy to understand.

FAREWELL

This is the hour when we must part from all
We know as home. Never again shall we
Awake at dawn to find the cherry tree
You set snow-white, or hear the bluebirds call
From the far fence. Summer will come, and fall,
But now our own green hill will never be
In bloom for us in spring, nor shall we see
The woodbine burn blood-red against the wall.
In us the old, old sorrow stirs, the ache
The first two lovers knew who left behind
Their ancient garden and returned no more;
Not only for ourselves but for their sake,
Perhaps we grieve afresh to close each blind:
We leave our Eden when we lock the door.

This Is America

A Communication

IN THE BRIGHT sunlit morning the train rolled down the Feather River canyon and stopped on a siding near a grove of Ponderosa pines. I walked up the track with the tall delegate from Yugoslavia. He inhaled the mountain air and looked off toward the distant peaks.

"America is the so great country, captain," he said. "We travel now, day after day, night after night, and still the land is America. We have never seen anything like this before. In Europe who would have crossed many nations, many boundaries, many customs and, oh, so many passports. Now we realize what America is. Now when we say 'America' we shall know exactly what we mean. We shall mean this so great country across which a train can go for so many days and nights."

Some people think that the late President Roosevelt selected San Francisco as the scene of the United Nations Conference in the deliberate hope that the delegates would see the United States—not merely New York, or Washington, or San Francisco itself, but the whole United States, spread out in a 3000-mile panorama from coast to coast.

This wish would have been in keeping with Mr. Roosevelt's ideas. Once a visitor asked him how to know and understand the United States. Go out to the Pacific seaboard by the Southern route, the President said. Then return by the Northern route. See the mountains and plains and forests and rivers and plateaus and valleys, he advised. Then, he concluded, the wayfarer would have some notion of what America was all about.

IN CONFORMANCE with this counsel of Mr. Roosevelt, the delegates to the United Nations Conference are seeing America as surely as if the late President himself were on hand to plan their itineraries. Don Watson, in charge of transportation for the State Department, selected routes which would afford a bona fide glimpse of the continent.

The trains bringing the foreign diplomats and their staffs spanned the Nation by numerous lines. Some of the visitors experienced the thrill of the Royal Gorge. Others saw the Wyoming Rockies. Still others rolled across Arizona's mesas and tablelands. All of them pressed their faces against the windows, as the varying landscape twisted and passed. "My country has no deeper canyon than that," said a Norwegian secretary, as the chasm of the Green River in Utah yawned in the middle distance.

The delegates did not glimpse the heterogeneous American scene—prairie by day, snowy mountains that night—without knowing something about it. On each special train the Library of Congress placed 125 selected volumes. These included the WPA Guides to each State crossed by that particular train. They also included such informal geographic books as Gertrude Atherton's "Golden Gate Country," "Lanks' "Highway to Alaska and Vestal's "The Missouri." I saw a Belgium delegate with a WPA map in his lap, following the progress of the train along Lake Utah and into the outskirts of Salt Lake City.

The multiplicity and magnitude of America's geographic features astounded the delegates. Lord Halifax said he never ceased to be amazed by the vast expanse of the Great Plains. A Frenchman, awed by the Rockies, watched in wonder as the train struggled with a second range, the Wasatch. And when the Sierra Nevada, faint and far on the horizon, came into view, he gasped.

EVEN A VISITOR like Molotov, so busy that all long trips had to be negotiated by plane, has glimpsed something of the diversity and resources of this Nation. He motored to the Kaiser shipyards on a Saturday afternoon and saw steel cargo ships being built in assembly-line fashion. And on the following Sunday morning, walking along a path in the cathedral-like silence of the John Muir redwoods, I came upon Molotov and his bodyguards, gazing up in wonder at the needled giants towering more than 300 feet into the California sky.

All the foreigners have an intense curiosity about America in general and the Far West in particular. A story appeared in a local newspaper about the Shasta Dam reclamation project in the nearby Central Valley. Immediately, delegates from four nations with irrigation problems, India and China and Australia and Saudi-Arabia, made arrangements to visit the great dam themselves. Marshal Smuts, heroic warrior-statesman of the Union of South Africa, read of Yosemite's plumed waterfalls and then rose at 4 in the morning to drive the 250 miles to the famous granite valley.

Many of the delegates have been amazed by the extent of America's natural resources.

"All of us have read about the great American continent," said a Frenchman, "yet this reading then seemer mere abstractions. Now we see these things for ourselves."

Franklin D. Roosevelt constantly urged all visitors from abroad to see the sundown side of the continent. One is sure that our late President would approve heartily could he see Molotov strolling in Muir Woods, Marshal Smuts gazing up at Nevada Falls, a Yugoslav examining the forests of the Feather River, Norwegians exclaiming at the beauties of the California seacoast, and Chinese admirals watching Liberty ships putting out through the Golden Gate.

Role Of Assembly

By Barnet Nover

Partial Victory For Small Powers

San Francisco.

ONE RESULT of the five weeks of discussion and debate that have taken place since the United Nations Conference first met has been a slight yet significant expansion in the functions of the General Assembly, the body that is to contain representatives of all the members of the new world league.

As was the case in the Dumbarton Oaks plan, the charter that is being drawn up here in San Francisco makes the Security Council the dominant body in the United Nations organization and the "Big Five," i. e., the United States, Russia, Britain, France and China, the dominant group in the Council.

It is true that pressure by the small nations has resulted in a partial curtailment of the originally unlimited authority the "Big Five" were to exercise within the Council. But the authority of the Council as a whole will be as great in the San Francisco Charter as it was in the Dumbarton Oaks plan.

There has been no considered attempt by anyone to change that arrangement. Thus no one has suggested that any of the authority that is to be vested in the Council should be transferred to the Assembly. The fact is recognized that the Assembly is too big, too unwieldly a body, to carry out executive functions.

THE REAL FIGHT has been not over the Council's authority but over the manner in which that authority is to be exercised. At the same time the smaller nations have put pressure on the nations responsible for the Dumbarton Oaks plan to give the Assembly a greater role than was originally intended.

It would be a gross exaggeration to say that this effort has achieved an unqualified measure of success. Yet progress has certainly been made during these last five weeks in making it possible for the Assembly to become that organ of international public opinion, which is all it can hope to be in a world dominated by great powers.

A step in that direction was the so-called Vandenberg amendment which was approved by the four nations that had sponsored the San Francisco Conference. This amendment would give the Assembly the authority to "initiate studies and make recommendations for the purpose of promoting international cooperation in political, economic, social and cultural fields to assist in the realization of human rights and basic freedoms for all, without distinction as to race, language, religion or sex and also for the encouragement and development of international law."

Cynics will argue that this is pretty vague and tenuous. Yet should the Assembly carry out the terms of this provision the results could hardly be anything but beneficial. In this connection it is a pity, however, that by a very close vote in committee a Belgian resolution, empowering the Assembly to draw up conventions on any subject, was turned down. But we have not yet heard the last of this proposal. It is certain to come up again later in the Conference.

In this field of international cooperation the Assembly, through its economic and social council and the supervisory authority it is to exercise over certain types of trusteeships, is likely to have a good deal more to do in the early years of the new World Organization than is the Council.

IN THE FIRST PLACE the task of enforcing the terms imposed on Germany (and later on Japan) will be outside the scope of the World Organization's authority; secondly, there is no reason to believe that there will be any major threat of war for some years—it may be many years—following the end of the present conflict. The great problems that will concern the world during the postwar period will not be so much prevention of war but economic recovery and social welfare. In these and related fields the Assembly can exercise a real measure of international leadership.

But even in the peace enforcement field the Assembly, while seemingly powerless, has a role to play under the Charter as it is emerging from the San Francisco Conference.

Another of the Vandenberg amendments, modifying and clarifying a provision already embodied in the Dumbarton Oaks plan, empowers the Assembly "to recommend measures for peaceful adjustment of any situation, regardless of origins, which it deems likely to impair the general welfare of friendly relations among nations, including situations resulting from a violation of the purposes and principles set forth in this Charter."

In line with this it has now been agreed that the Council is to make at least an annual report to the Assembly. Furthermore, it is required to notify the Assembly when it has ceased to deal with a matter that has come before it, possibly as a result of a lack of unity among the "Big Five." The way would then be open for the Assembly to take up the problem that the Council had grappled with in vain.

THE WHOLE QUESTION of the Assembly's secondary jurisdiction in matters involving the peace of the world requires further clarification. As the Canadian representative on the committee dealing with the Assembly's functions put it the other day, it would not hurt the world organization to have a second line of defense against aggression. The danger the world may have to face, he said, may not be that the Council will prove to be too strong, but (through internal differences among the "Big Five") too weak, not too powerful, but powerless. In view of the sharp differences of opinion that have arisen among the "Big Three" recently this thesis is a good deal less paradoxical than it seems.

Army Oldsters

Thanks for that good editorial on "Army Oldsters." Now that's what I call voicing the opinion of a group of your readers. Thanks very much also for printing those letters from your readers on the subject. I've clipped all of these to send to my husband who, as you can guess, is in this group—it'll cheer him no end.

Coincidentally, he sent me letters of a similar nature which appeared in the overseas Army paper in his mail which arrived yesterday.

MARY SLAVITT.
Washington, May 24.

The criticism of the War Department point system for discharge of soldiers in failing to give any weight to the age factor, appears to be well taken. The editorial and letter appearing on The Post's May 24 editorial page state the case pretty clearly.

Not only is there discrimination against men over 35, but the announcement of the Army's new Selective Service rules deferring indefinitely men over 30, makes this discriminatory feature more marked. If men over 30 are not now useful to the Army, the men of the same age who have seen active service have a greater claim for a return to civilian status.

This deficiency can be corrected by a very simple addition to the point system as presently in effect. A credit of 5 points should be allowed every soldier for every year that he is over 30. Thus a man in the service who has seen action would get, at the age of 30 an additional credit of 5 points and a man of 35, an additional credit of 25 points and so on.

The fairness of such a modification is apparent from the fact that age alone will not release a soldier but will be a factor which added to his service record, will compensate for the deficiency in the present point system.

CHARLES ROBERTS
Arlington, Va., May 24.

Every GI in his 30s appreciates your editorial of May 24 titled "Army Oldsters." It is good to know that we still have some people who haven't forgotten that we older men are still to be taken care of and are still in the Army.

Probably the War Department's only delay in lowering the age limit is because of the expected congestion of the separation centers caused by returning combat troops. I'm willing to sweat it out for these boys to get processed on their way out but the WD can't tell me they couldn't handle demobilization of the oldsters right at the base level rather than the separation centers. It's being done every day and has been done all during the war. It's just another Army line and the Army can run you through a line quicker than Harry Truman captured the confidence of the American people, and brother, that was rapid.

In civilian life I was an Associated Press editor on one of the largest bureaus. In the Army I have been a glamourized Western Union boy sans the bicycle. One more year of this leg work at my age and I'll need a two-wheeled armchair with a C card.

One Million Bombs

In an editorial on May 16, "One Million Bombs," you raised the question as to whether or not Japanese surrender might not be speeded "if they had a clear understanding of what surrender would entail." Undoubtedly it would. Surely the terms which we intend to impose in the so-called unconditional surrender are known to us now, and will not be materially changed by any additional slaughter on either side. Then why not announce them?

Are not these likely to be the basic terms:

1. Complete surrender of all armaments and weapons;
2. Withdrawal to the confines which contained Japan say 100 years ago, and restitution of stolen property;
3. Surrender and trial of war criminals;
4. United Nations' controls to insure that there be no rearmament in the future.

If these are the terms, what harm could come from saying so? If knowledge of these terms will speed surrender, as it well may, it is criminal not to make the effort by announcing them. Incidentally, just what purpose is being served by concealing the conditions of the "unconditional surrender" tendered by Italy and by Germany? The Italians and Germans must already be finding out what they are—only we are being kept in the dark. Perhaps the Elmer Davis theory is being applied to us instead of to the Germans—that we should only be told "what is good for us to know."

Yours for a just and durable peace—and the sooner the better.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

Emissary Hopkins

BEHIND THE STORY of Harry L. Hopkins' sudden trip to Europe is a fascinating bit of human drama that is related to the larger drama of Russian-American relations now occupying the center of the world stage.

At the time of President Roosevelt's death Hopkins left the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn., to come back to Washington for the funeral of his closest friend and great benefactor. He did not return to Mayo's; instead, he retired to his smallish house in Georgetown to try to recuperate there.

Much speculation centered on whether Hopkins would fill for President Truman somewhat the same role he had assumed for the dead President; that is, as world trouble-shooter and negotiator. It was obvious that he had a greater store of knowledge, out of his experiences during the past five years, than any other individual.

IN THEIR FIRST two talks Truman and Hopkins quickly came to an understanding. Hopkins' own desire was to step out of the picture completely. He wanted to devote himself entirely to writing the history of the war and the troubled years that led up to it. Large offers from magazines and publishing houses assured his financial independence during the time that he would set down the intimate history of the crowded 12 years from 1933 to 1945.

Moreover, he told the President that he would be more of a liability than an asset because of the enemies he had made on the Hill. They would not forgive him now that Roosevelt was dead.

The two men agreed that Hopkins would retire as early as possible. Hopkins fully expected an announcement to this effect out of the President's press conference.

Then came the worsening of relations between Russia and the Western Allies. The situation plainly called for something more than routine diplomatic exchanges. It called for someone who could talk frankly, and yet in a friendly way, with Stalin. Above all, it was important to clear up certain basic misunderstandings before the next meeting of the Big Three, to which Truman would come as a stranger.

The President asked Hopkins if he would go in spite of his ill health. In their previous talks, the latter had said that if there was any mission he could perform at any time, he would be happy to do it. In spite of the fact that he looks, as one of his friends put it, like someone rescued from the Bachau Concentration Camp, his answer was yes.

So the frail, stooped man who first flew to Russia in the summer of 1941, following the fatal blunder of the Nazis in their attack on the Soviet Union, is going back. Even for someone in perfect health, it would be an arduous and trying trip. For Hopkins, a shadow of his old self, it represents a grave risk.

He, perhaps, more than any single individual, British or American, has talked face to face with Russia's No. 1. Besides the long conversations they had together in 1941, leading up to the lend-lease agreement with the Soviet Union, Hopkins saw Stalin at Tehran and Yalta and had private talks with him there. This will be the background for his present conversations in the great, gloomy fortress that is the Kremlin.

Accompanying Hopkins and Ambassador W. Averill Harriman, although it was not announced at the time of their departure, was Charles E. Bohlen, whose official title has been Assistant to the Secretary of State for White House Liaison. Bohlen, who served several years in our Embassy in Moscow before his State Department assignment, speaks Russian fluently.

At both Tehran and Yalta, he acted as President Roosevelt's interpreter in the talks with Stalin and Foreign Commissar Molotov, so that he is almost as familiar as Hopkins with what was agreed to at those all-important meetings. Bohlen, moreover, has a long background of knowledge of Russia and the personalities around Stalin.

Hopkins' primary objective will be to prepare the way, through a broadened understanding, for the next Big Three meeting. Austria and the fate of the war criminals will be two of the most important issues he will take up. It is a gallant effort that he is making, and he deserves all possible credit for it.

Book Subsidy

Your editorial favoring continuance of the eight-million-dollar annual subsidy for low postage rates on books failed to give the whole story. When the Postoffice Department offered to lower book postage a few years ago, book publishers promised to lower the price of books. They were then about $2 to $2.25. As anyone knows, publishers raised prices instead to $2.75 and $3, so the public and the taxpayer are not only being charged higher prices for the books they buy but must still pay an eight-million-dollar subsidy for low postal rates. Who's the sucker?

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Mr. Truman's Foreign Policy

IT IS, of course, important to have a meeting of the chiefs of government but President Truman is very wise indeed in insisting that he must be well prepared before he attends it. In fact, he ought to have a very good understanding before he goes to meet Mr. Churchill and Marshal Stalin about the agreements they are able and willing to make.

LIPPMANN

For personal conversations among men who have final responsibility are most useful when the issues have been carefully defined, and the most likely solutions worked out for their final choice and decision, by their diplomatic and military advisers.

If this staff work has not been well done in advance, the chiefs of governments are as likely as not to think they have an understanding when in fact they have not come fully to grips with the problem.

THE EFFECTIVENESS of the inter-allied meetings from the time of Mr. Churchill's visit to Washington just after Pearl Harbor until the Yalta Conference of 1945 was closely related to the effectiveness of the staff work which preceded them. The Anglo-American military co-operation was remarkedly good, and the strategical choices made by Roosevelt and Churchill proved to be brilliantly correct. That was because the Joint Chiefs of Staff, British and American, and the Combined Chiefs of Staff, had so thoroughly defined the issues and the choices for the Prime Minister and the President to decide. In the diplomatic field, as for example in regard to France, Italy, the Balkans, there was no comparable joint and combined staff work to guide them, and the result, as all the world knows, was improvisation which did not have brilliant results.

An unprepared meeting of very high officials can easily produce confusion rather than clarification. Messrs. Molotov, Eden, and Stettinius in San Francisco are a case in point. The fact that the foreign ministers came raised high hopes. But the fact that their meeting was virtually impromptu, that there was no efficient preparation in advance about what they were to discuss and to decide, resulted in their spending most of their time on secondary matters, and even irrelevant ones, to the neglect of the great problems that are the business of foreign ministers. We have now had to send Mr. Hopkins to Moscow and Mr. Davies to London to take up the questions that were pushed aside while Messrs. Molotov, Eden, and Stettinius in San Francisco were discussing the Argentine and how to find a formula to reconcile the Act of Chapultepec with Dumbarton Oaks, and who was to be chairman, and similar interesting but secondary matters.

IN PREPARING for an international meeting of the highest officials, there is no use imagining that an American President and an American Secretary of State can have the same kind of intimate and detailed knowledge of specific situations in Europe and the Middle East as their British and Soviet colleagues. There are no experts capable of providing that kind of knowledge; the experts do not agree, and so the maker of a foreign policy has to listen to experts and then decide among them.

In the case of the British and the Russians there are long-established objectives and lines of policy which their experts are trained to support. Thus the area of conflict between the British Empire and the Russian empire extends from the Adriatic through the Middle East to the Persian Gulf. When both Britain and Russia are in mortal danger, as they were from Napoleonic France and in our century from Pan-Germany, they lay aside their imperial conflict. When the mortal danger disappears, the conflict reappears, no matter whether Russia is czarist or communist, whether Britain is tory or liberal. The security of the two empires is believed to be at stake on whether Britain, which is an island, controls the sea and land passage from Europe to Asia, or Russia, which is landlocked, controls her own exits to the oceans. Balkan politics, Middle Eastern politics, and the ideologies, which change in the course of time but are always opposed, are the pawns, not the kings and queens, in this conflict.

PRESIDENT TRUMAN'S problem is to shape an American policy which will compose and, if possible, resolve constructively and permanently this ancient conflict. This cannot be done in one meeting. He can only make a beginning by making it clear to our allies and to our own people that he knows the difference between the kings and the pawns, between the real issues on the one hand, the local incidents and the ideologies on the other. He can make it clear that the American interest, which is our own peace and security, is to compose the imperial conflict and not to become entangled in it.

As a demonstration of his own purpose, Mr. Truman could not have made a better beginning than by his first independent moves, done on his own authority as President. He has put himself in direct relations with Moscow through Mr. Hopkins, with London through Mr. Davies, with Paris through his reception of M. Bidault, and by his handsome gesture in calling for Mr. Hoover, he has emphasized his understanding that if Europe is to settle down, it must eat and must recover.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

The gentleman isn't shouting about it, but among the four members of the Senate Appropriations Committee who voted against the $2500 extra expense allowance for Senators and Congressmen was Tennessee's venerable Senator Kenneth McKellar, now President of the Senate.

McKellar's negative vote came after he had won the Appropriations Committee's okay on a $15,000 office expense allotment for himself, making him the highest paid member of the Senate. As Senate President, the Tennessee solon receives vice presidential pay of $15,000 instead of senatorial pay of $10,000; also has the use of the Vice President's big limousine plus chauffeur; and according to the new legislative appropriation bill, can now hire additional clerks up to $15,000. This is in addition to the allowance for help he gets as Senator from Tennessee.

The subcommittee which worked on the appropriation bill didn't know what to do with the customary provision of $15,000 to hire office help for the Vice President, since there is no Vice President. So it was decided to leave the matter open, offering McKellar a chance to volunteer to cut out the allowance from the bill. McKellar has his regular senatorial staff and it was not believed he would require the additional $15,000.

When Subcommittee Chairman Overton of Louisiana read the bill before the full Appropriations Committee, he paused meaningfully when he came to the $15,000 item, waiting for McKellar to speak. McKellar didn't hesitate.

"I think you'd better leave in that allowance," he said. "Of course, I won't use it unless I have to, but it's just as well to have it in."

His slightly embarrassed colleages complied.

This made a total for the Senator from Tennessee of $5,000 pay increase, $15,000 for office help, plus the vice presidential limousine and chauffeur, plus $7,000 paid to his brother, Hugh C. McKellar as Postmaster at Memphis, plus $4,500 paid to another brother, Don McKellar, as his secretary, plus $2,800 to Mrs. Don McKellar as clerk on McKellar's Post Office Committee. Total net take of the McKellar family, $44,300—not counting chauffeur and limousine.

In spite of which, McKellar turned around and voted against letting his colleagues have $2500 extra expense allowance. Probable reason: Tennessee's boss, Ed Crump, has come out against the $2500 increase.

Razzing the Reds

An illustration of how some U. S. officials needlessly whip up resentment against the Russians occurred when the San Francisco Conference waited to hear Stalin's answer to the proposed compromise on permitting regional groups of nations, such as the Pan American Union, to settle their own controversies.

Michigan's Senator Vandenberg, who doesn't like the Soviet, though he had a good-humored relationship with Molotov, whispered to fellow diplomats and newsmen that the Russians were "delaying" the Conference. He even urged privately that the Conference proceed without Russia, merely give the Soviet Union the brush-off as it did regarding Argentina.

This time Stettinius restrained Vandenberg. However, the Michigan Senator continued to fret about "Red delays," finally could stand it no longer. At a meeting of the American delegation, he demanded that the United States move for immediate enactment of the regional security compromise and ignore the Russian response.

"We've waited four days," Vandenberg fumed, "and that's long enough."

It fell to Assistant Secretary Jimmy Dunn, himself no Russian lover, to put Vandenberg in his place.

"Four days is not enough," Dunn said. "You may not know it, Senator, but diplomatic communications are very slow. It takes us 72 hours to get a communication to our Embassy in Moscow and back by cable, what with coding and decoding. So you can see, the Russians just haven't had enough time."

"My goodness," replied Vandenberg, "I had no idea it takes so long. In that case we must give them more time. Why in hell didn't someone tell me about that?"

Note—In the end Moscow replied with a formula permitting regional security operations, which was acceptable to the Conference.

New Secretary Of Agriculture

Tall, curly-headed Clint Anderson, newly appointed Secretary of Agriculture, nearly left Washington for good last year. Determined not to spend more than two terms in Congress, Anderson sold his Washington home, shipped his saddle horses back to his New Mexico ranch and told friends he would not run again for Congress.

It was when he returned to New Mexico a few weeks later that he was finally convinced he should stick it out for one more term. Anderson was the most popular Democrat in the State, and there was grave concern that Republican money pouring into Nex Mexico might turn it against Roosevelt.

This argument was a potent one, for Anderson has long been a devoted admirer of the late President. Even before coming to Congress, he spent his spare time collecting all sorts of literature about Roosevelt. In his office today are two large book shelves containing books and articles on FDR. His collection of Roosevelt documents at home is one of the most complete in any private library.

"I never went in for special printings and private editions," says the new Secretary of Agriculture. "What motivated me in the case of Roosevelt is that 50 years from now he will be as important in our history as Lincoln or our other great leaders—possibly more so. I simply felt that a library of what is written about Roosevelt by his contemporaries will be of great value a generation hence. Just think how interesting such a library on Lincoln would be today."

Book collecting is not new to Anderson. Ten years ago, when he was traveling New Mexico as Assistant WPA Administrator, he began to haunt bookstores, browsing through old volumes on cattle-raising, banditry in the Wild West, gold strikes, etc. As a result, the new Secretary of Agriculture now has a library of over 3000 volumes, generally considered one of the finest private collections on the history of the West.

One further collection is in Anderson's office—a set of official records on wartime budget hearings which Anderson keeps because he feels the details of how our Government spent its billions in this war will be of value for future study.

Note—Congressman Anderson claims he doesn't go in for expensive collectors' books—though Mrs. Anderson does not entirely agree with him. Under cross-examination, he admits that he has paid up to $400 for a volume or set. But from Mrs. Anderson it is learned that with the help of his secretary, Rose Koenig, she has kept him to a weekly allowance for books. During the past few months, however, Anderson has been so busy investigating the food shortage that he has not used up his book allowance.

San Francisco M. P.

Security precautions have now been tightened 100 per cent at the San Francisco Conference. Military police, formerly lax, are now under orders to admit no one without scrutinizing passes.

The other day, Secretary of State Stettinius was meeting with the Powerful Steering Committee and led British Ambassador Lord Halifax and Chinese Foreign Minister T. V. Soong from one conference room to another on a different floor. At the door of the elevator, the three delegates were stopped by two M. P.

Where are your passes?" they asked.

"Why I don't believe I have mine," answered Stettinius, fumbling in his pocket. Soong and Halifax were equally embarrassed. So were other members of the Steering Committee, as the soldiers barred the way to the elevator. Finally, Stettinius spotted youthful Conference Secretary Alger Hiss.

"Hey, Alger," called the Secretary of State, "come over here and help us get in."

Hiss came to the rescue, arranged for his chief and other top United Nations colleagues to proceed. The delegates agreed, however, that the Military Police were right, appreciated their efficiency.

We Are A Nation

By Merlo Pusey

Hope Of Postwar Decentralization

DECENTRALIZATION will be the watchword for postwar America. We have had so much congestion, crowding and centralization during the war that folks are certain to rush to the other extreme at the first opportunity. Therein lies our best hope for an easier, more productive and more satisfying mode of living.

PUSEY

Straws in the wind are already in evidence. The Interstate Commerce Commission has launched a move to relieve the South and West of "unduly prejudicial" freight rates. Big industry is beginning to purchase sites for plants in small communities. Even Henry Ford has renounced any intention of operating the gigantic bomber plant at Willow Run in peacetime. Congress is ardently courting little business and discussing the creation of additional river valley authorities to lure industry into virgin territory by the promise of cheap power.

All these signs point to a more even filling out of a country that has become tragically lopsided. Indeed, the tide was running strongly toward decentralization until the war threw that movement into reverse. In the decade ending in 1940 the highly industrialized North was staic, while sharp gains in both population and industrial growth were recorded for the South and West. Most big cities failed to hold their own. Americans were beginning to flee from their cave dwellings and catacombs.

But the war sent us scurrying back. Weapons had to be built as fast as it was humanly possible to build them. The Government spent billions of dollars for new plants—most of them in congested cities where power and labor and transportation were already at hand. Farms and villages were drained of their manpower. Big cities almost burst at the seams from the invasions of warworkers.

THIS UNNATURAL crowding and the problems of delinquency, crime and discontent following in its wake have sharpened our vision of the future. They have intensified our consciousness of disease pockets in the big cities and illiteracy belts in the wide open spaces. They have made us realize that rags and riches are not the expression of democracy as between sections of the country any more than they are as between individuals.

We may expect national policy to reflect this new sense of common interests among our people. No longer is the United States merely an aggregation of States or regions. Arkansas farmers have had the experience of making tanks in Detroit. New York cliff dwellers have acquired new physique in the training camps of Georgia and Arizona. We are now a Nation in the more exacting sense of that word. Consequently, we shall have stronger forces working for a more evenly balanced national economy.

Some would prefer to let economic development follow its own course without interference from the Government. But Government has already interfered. Its construction of additional war plants in the great centers of industry has probably been the greatest centralizing influence in our history. Now the Government must help to undo the unfortunate results of that emergency measure. If we expect to preserve the present heightened sense of national unity, the Government must necessarily work toward equalization of economic opportunity.

WHAT CAN the Government do to foster a better balance in our lopsided economy? The ICC has given us a courageous example by moving to narrow the disparities in freight rates. Congress can help by fostering little business and by insisting that the millstone of wartime bureaucracy be lifted from the necks of private enterprise as expeditiously as possible. The development of water and power resources in regions not yet industrialized is also of great importance.

Industry can help by making use of war plants in the West and South whenever that is feasible and by choosing non-congested areas for new enterprises. Already there is a strong move in this direction. Manufacturers are discovering that there are real values in small city environments. When workers own their own homes and garden plots, a higher degree of stability and contentment can be expected. Life has fewer irritations and more of the advantages that are traditionally associated with free America.

It is not to be supposed that this decentralization movement will put an end to bigness. Probably the growth of bigness will be arrested, but more important is the redirection of our national growth—the application of engineering, science and industrial methods to hitherto backward areas. New energy will thus be poured into the building of a well-rounded Nation.

First Montgomery Diphtheria Case Since August '43 Reported

Montgomery County's first diphtheria case among children since August, 1943, was reported yesterday by Dr. V. L. Ellicott, county health officer. The victim is a three-year-old girl at Hunting Hill.

Citing that the child had never been immunized with diphtheria toxoid, Dr. Ellicott warned all parents to have their children immunized unless they are sure this has been done completely. Because of the serious nature of the disease and the danger to exposed persons, Dr. Ellicott particularly cautioned residents of the Hunting Hill and Travilah areas, which are in the upper section of the county.

If for any reason parents cannot secure immunization service from their private physicians, Dr. Ellicott asked that the Health department be notified.

There were no cases of diphtheria reported in the county in 1944. Because of the previous high prevalence in the Rockville and Gtithersburg areas, including the part of the county where the above case was reported, the health department has maintained a part-time worker for more than two years, to visit parents and urge toxoid innoculations for children.

"While this intensive effort has almost eliminated diphtheria," Dr. Ellicott said, "we must bear in mind that this is an area in which diphtheria is likely to recur. Every child in it should receive the full number of inoculations: two doses of toxoid at six months of age and a third dose on admission to school."

Juvenile Court Study Group Meets Tonight

The Rev. Dr. Hawes Palmore Clarke, chairman of the Alexandria juvenile court study committee composed of delegates from the Alexandria Ministerial Association, Alexandria Council of Parent-Teacher Associations, Alexandria Medical Society and Alexandria Council of Social Agencies, has called a meeting of the group for tonight at the Regester Building of the Washington Street Methodist Church, 115 S. Washington st., Alexandria, to further outline the committee's policy.

Mrs. Jamieson E. Holway, chairman of the P-TA Council's juvenile protection committee which organized the committee to gain support for separation of the Alexandria Juvenile and Domestic Relations Court from the Alexandria Civil and Police Court and to determine a satisfactory method for selection of the new juvenile judge, said that additional organizations will be represented on the committee and are sending delegates for the first time tonight.

The groups include the Alexandria Junior Chamber of Commerce, Alexandria Business and Professional Woman's Club, the Alexandria Civitan Club, Alexandria Woman's Club, Carlyle Woman's Club and the individual Parent-Teacher Associations from the various Alexandria schools.

Separation of the courts effective January 1 of next year has become law now that Gov. Colgate W. Darden, jr., of Virginia has approved a bill passed in the extraordinary session of the Virginia General Assembly. While the bill introduced by Delegate W. Selden vides for a referendum on the question of whether the new judge should be elected by the people or appointed by the Alexandria City Council, it does not include the recommendation from the civic committee that an advisory court commission be formed to submit a list of qualified persons from which the council should make its selection if the appointive system is favored in the referendum.

The committee has expressed dissatisfaction with the omission and with the fact that the bill provides that the new judge must have had at least two years of law practice before taking office. Acording to Mrs. Holway, national authorities point out that successful juvenile judges need not have had experience in law practice.

Fire Damages School

Baltimore, May 28 (AP).—Public School No. 114 for Negro children was destroyed partially by a fire which started under the roof and apparently had burned for some time before its discovery last night. The 420 pupils have been shifted to another school.

EYES, HEARTS
AND WAR TRAINS
NOW TURN WEST!

The job is half done!

To destroy Nazism, the warring power of America grew from a spark to a raging fire. Production soared to unheard-of heights. America's railroads, the primary channels of war transportation, performed feats many thought impossible.

The determination of railroad workers was a major factor in this success. But, their determination without the wholehearted cooperation of the traveling public, shippers, governmental officials and military and naval leaders could not have succeeded as it did. For all this help, given so willingly, the Baltimore & Ohio says, "deepest thanks!"

But now America, her people and her power turn west . . . to crush quickly a treacherous enemy.

The mammoth size of this "moving job" has been vividly described by a high ranking Army officer. He said, "It will be like moving the entire City of Cleveland, Ohio, half-way around the world!"

To speed this task, Baltimore & Ohio's war trains will thunder over our 11,000 miles of track, in any number needed, to move the flood of fighting men and materials toward America's great Pacific ports . . . toward beachheads on the soil of Japan.

The war-transport job ahead will not be an easy one. It will continue to demand all the cooperation, determination and toil that can be mustered. But, the job will be done! Supplies needed to hasten the day of final victory will be moved on time. That is the pledge of the B&O and its 70,000 workers.

—With Shirley Povich

When Burning Dream goes to the post in the June 9 Kentucky Derby he'll be trying to win a race his daddy couldn't win. The son of Bimelech will make the effort five years after his pappy all but broke the good folks of the Kentucky countryside by his failure to win the Derby at odds-on, in 1940.

POVICH

That was the year when Bimelech went to the post at 40 cents on the dollar, as the hot favorite in the small eight-horse field. He was racing in the colors of E. R. Bradley, which fact alone always drives the price down in Kentucky inasmuch as the hardboots ask only that a Bradley horse be half as good as anything else in the field. However, Bimelech had just won the Derby trial purse and was rated the class of the field.

One of the same horses Bimelech had beaten in the Derby trial ran away from the 4-to-10 favorite on Derby Day, though. Gallahadion, a 35 to 1 shot, moved up on Bimelech in the stretch run and led him over the wire by a length and a half. It was a triumph for the hardened horsemen who count no horse as a sure-thing in any race, on the theory "they still have to run around the track." Bimelech ran wide at all the turns.

Of Bimelech's quality there is no doubt, though, and Burning Dream supposedly inherits the speed and staying attributes of his sire. A week after his Derby defeat, Bimelech beat Gallahadion and a better field in the Preakness at Pimlico. Burning Dream is now the hope of the West in the Derby.

Burning Dream, like his daddy, won the pre-Derby test, the trial race of the Keeneland meeting. He won coming from behind and going away, in the good time of 1:38 1/5 for the mile, and off that performance he may not be troubled by the added quarter-mile of the Derby. He beat the previously unbeaten Free For All, John March's Questionnaire colt that, till that race, was the Derby favorite.

It could be a wide-open Derby, though. With the absence of winter racing, there has been no line on the talents of the top three-year-olds. Carrying Eastern hopes will doubtless be Jeep, the C. V. Whitney colt that won the Experimental Handicap at Jamaica, and Alexis, owned by the Christiana Stable which thinks highly of the colt by the imported stallion, Heliopolis.

The fact is, though, that this year's Preakness is taking shape as a better race than the Derby. The Pimlico classic which will be run the week following the Derby will almost certainly match the Kentucky winner with William Jefford's unbeaten 3-year-old Pavot. The Pimlico people have Jeffords to thank for making their race a success.

Jeffords deliberately withheld Pavot from the Derby, although he might have entered the colt had he known the Derby would be held a month later than usual, as is being done. Like many an owner who is not concerned with the size of feed bills, Jeffords refused to rush his colt into training for the Derby, and risk injury.

There is too much worth waiting for, Jeffords has reasoned. The Preakness, the Belmont, the Lawrence and the big Chicago stakes are seemingly push-overs for Pavot if he holds his 2-year-old form, and Jeffords believes he can afford to forego the Derby with its attendant risks to his unbeaten son of Case Ace.

Derby Boss Col. Matt J. Winn was recalling the other days his partnership with Price McKinney, multimillionaire steel magnate who helped Winn operate tracks in Juarez and Maryland.

"The year 1916 was very profitable for McKinney," he related. A month before Christmas, he asked Mrs. McKinney to name her own Christmas present. "I can't decide between a chinchilla coat or a pearl necklace," she said.

How much is the chinchilla coat?" McKinney asked.

"$30,000," said his wife.

"That's out," said McKinney. "No fur coat was ever worth $30,000."

So, according to Winn, Mrs. McKinney bought the pearl necklace and had the bill sent to her husband. It was for $250,000.

The beloved "Old Bones" was actually foaled May 30 (Memorial Day), but the "party" was held Sunday so that the kiddies could attend. Exterminator won 50 races in 99 starts.

A Costly Mistake:

Easy Spell Gives Jamaica Stewards a Tough Spell

New York, May 28 (AP).—Stewards of Jamaica's Metropolitan Jockey Club decided today their association had paid off on the wrong horse last Monday at the rate of $55.40 for $2 in straight betting and at $1001 for $2 in the daily double.

The stewards definitely identified the winner of the race as Grandpa Max. Previously Easy Spell had been regarded as the winner.

Both of the 2-year-olds are trained by Sol Rutchick, who admits he can't tell the difference between the two. They are by the same sire, Easy Mon, and have the same coloring and conformity except that Easy Spell has a white spot on his right hind leg. Both are owned by Fred Lansburgh.

Neither had raced before last Monday. Grandpa Max, programmed as Easy Spell, won the opening race of the New York season. Easy Spell, listed on the program as Grandpa Max, finished ninth in a nine-horse field on Wednesday.

Marshall Cassidy, assistant secretary of the Jockey Club (New York) said the betting pay-offs would stand but that first place money in the race would go to Twenty-six, who finished second in the race.

"It was an innocent mistake," said Cassidy, "and no other penalty will be imposed."

When Easy Spell's registration certificate was produced in the paddock before the May 21 race, the failure of the paper to list the white spot was noticed but the colt was approved and the papers sent to Trainer Rutchick for correction.

Later a study of the two colts and their certificates brought out the discrepancy and today an affidavit from Marvin Childs of Nicholsville, Ky., farmer manager for the Henry H. Knight breeding establishment, straightened out the matter.

After Wednesday's race A. L. Kleven purchased Grandpa Max, really Easy Spell, and Cassidy said that Kleven "now has the right or refusal to buy the thoroughbred."

Pacific Bound Troops to Take Athletic Drills

An extensive sports program will be part of the reconditioning in this country for Army ground force troops en route from Europe to the Pacific.

Outlining the program yesterday, the Army said every soldier will be required to participate in swimming and boxing and in one team sport as part of the regular military training schedule.

Competitive sports participation will be a leisure hour matter.

There will be an instructor and assistant for each of the sports in each unit of company size. Besides swimming and boxing, training in football, baseball, softball and basketball will be given.

The swimming instruction will include combat swimming and "water security" such as swimming with the clothes on, carrying equipment above water, splashing through water covered with burning oil, and rescue work, according to Associated Press.

Intercamp competition in the various sports probably will be arranged, the Army said, and some leagues may be set up, subject to transportation limitations and military training requirements.

The sports-reconditioning program, directed by Col. Kenneth Buchanan of the Army Ground Force Ttraining Section, was planned by the following sports figures:

Matt Mann and Ed Kennedy, swimming coaches at University of Michigan and Columbia University, respectively; Hank Iba, whose Oklahoma A. and B. team captured the national basketball title at Madison Square Garden last year; Joe Brown, Princeton boxing coach; Jack Coombs, Duke University baseball coach; Tad Weiman, former Princeton football coach, and Asa Bushnell, commissioner of the Eastern Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

Nova Expected To Draw Big House

Norfolk, Va., May 28 (AP).—Matchmaker Chris Dundee packed 4500 fans into the USO auditorium when Arturo Godoy, the South American heavyweight champion, fought Laurient Boutchard here on March 1, but he feels confident that Lou Nova, the Alemada, Calif., assassin, will prove just as popular.

The California heavyweight, a red-hot contender for Sergt. Joe Louis' crown, will appear here on a USO-sponsored professional boxing show Friday, June 8, in a 10-rounder.

Matchmaker Dundee said he had not selected Nova's opponent.

Chisox Get 15 Hits, Top Bosox, 8-6

Boston, May 28 (AP).—The Chicago White Sox got 15 hits off 4 Boston pitchers today to end their six-game losing streak and win a 8-6 victory over the Boston Red Sox.

The White Sox went into the game without batting practice, Manager Jimmy Dykes gathering his men in the locker for a pep talk instead.

Tony Cuccinello, who got four for four, led the Chicago attack with three singles and a double.

The Red Sox were leading 4 to 2 going into the fifth, Bob Johnson's sixth homer of the season with two on climaxing a four-run rally in the third.

In the fifth, with one out, the White Sox hit six consecutive sinbles, four of them off starting pitcher Rex Cecil and two off Relief Man Mike Ryba, to creep ahead 5-4.

Chicago clinched the game in the sixth when Oris Hockett tripled with two on for another two runs.

3-Way Spill At Jamaica Injures Jemis

Jamaica Race Track, N. Y., May 28 (AP).—Three jockeys and three mounts fell just after entering the stretch in the featured Rostand Purse today and one of the riders, Nick Jemas, remained on the ground until removed to first aid quarters in the track ambulance. However, Jemas recovered quickly and was reported to have a bruised instep and possible fractured nose. He was to go to a Jackson Heights, Long Island, hospital for further treatment and a check-up.

Eddie Arcaro and Mike Caffarella were fortunate to escape injury. Jemas rode Briggs F. Spach's Turnplate, Arcaro was on Hugh McL. Fenwick's Wood and Derby eligible Hillyer Court, and Caffarella piloted Jule Fink's Zacotilla. Arcaro, rated by many the tops in his profession, had a bruised arm but he and Caffarella rode in the following event.

The spectacular spill gave a big crowd of 31,316 their first scare of the young season. Jemas is employed by William Helis.

The mile and a sixteenth event for three-year-olds was won by Millbrook Stable's favored Hal, which won by three lengths in 1:46 4/5 and paid $5.40. Wheatley Stable's Mountaineer was second, with Col. C. V. Whitney's Derby eligible, Cave Man, a head behind.

Hillyer Court led by a slight margin over Zacotilla until the accident. As they turned into the home lane, the Fenwick colt suddenly bolted out, lost his stride and went down. Zacotilla also was knocked off stride and fell, then Turnplate also crashed over them. Arcaro and Caffarella arose almost immediately and the three horses also regained their feet and galloped off.

Hal, rated close up from the start, raced clear after the spill. He is eligible for the Wodd and Preakness. Mountainer closed a big gap. Cave Man and his running-mate, Burra Peg, which went into the air at the start, are Derby eligibles.

Golfers Play Two Rounds at Once

Richmond, Va., May 28 (AP).—Harry Haverstick, one-time faced Charlie Kent in the quarter-finals of the Country Club of Virginia spring tournament. Bill Venable had already reached the semi-finals and was to play the winner of the Haverstick-Kent match.

Time off being what it is nowadays and Venable being on hand they decided to play quarter-finals and semi-finals together. In the three cornered play Haverstick, a former Pennsylvania State Amateur Champion, fired a par 69 which was good enough to beat Kent and Venable by the identical score of 7 and 6.

He will now play the winner of the W. T. Steele-Ed Rucker match sometime this week.

New York, May 28 (AP).—The New York Yankee management announced today that the postponed game with the St. Louis Browns scheduled for this afternoon would be played as part of a doubleheader at the Yankee Stadium, Wednesday July 18.

An exhibition tilt has been listed with the Boston Red Sox for June 11 at Camp Upton.

Broken Promise—Unintentional:

Marine Quit Ring to Avoid Injury, Is Hero on Okinawa

CORPL. MARCEL J. WICKA of Arlington, Va., once promised his wife he would never do another thing that would invite injury to himself and quit the prize ring. So he joined the Marines and is spending his time eradicating Japs on bloody Okinawa—which isn't exactly a patty-cake party. With his buddy, Corpl. James V. Brown (right) of Yolyn, W. Va., they are exhibiting some of the loot they acquired during their "vacation" on the Pacific bastion. He wants his wife to know if he broke his promise he couldn't help it. His wife, Lucille, and 6-year-old daughter live at 618 North Edison st., Arlington.

Okinawa (Delayed).—A former Marine corps boxer who retired from the ring because he promised his wife that he'd "never take another chance of getting hurt," has had nothing to do with the breach of this promise. It's all a fault of the Japs on Okinawa.

He is Marine Corpl. Marcel J. Wicka of 618 North Edison st., Arlington, Va., who served with the Marines in China from 1929 until he received his discharge in 1933. Until he reenlisted on January 11, 1944, he had been a Government clerk.

Weighing-in at 155 pounds today, Wicka boxed as a middleweight, light-heavyweight and heavyweight in China where he fought Chinese, British and Russian civilian and soldier fighters. After he was discharged at Mare Island, Calif., in 1933 he continued his boxing career, but his wife, the former Lucille F. Roach of Minona, Minn., persuaded him to give up the ring.

Made Promise to Wife

"It was a promise I made to my wife that I'd never take another chance of getting hurt," Wicka told correspondents here at the end of one of the climactic battles for this peninsula.

During the battle, machine-gun bullets broke the ground "behind, beside and in front" of Wicka when his platoon, leading the advance on the strategic height, withdrew a reform its lines after a sudden burst of Jap mortar and machine-gun fire. Wicka and his buddy, Corpl. James V. Brown of Yolyn, W. Va., elected to remain behind and "pick off the snipers."

"I fired at one," Wicka explained. "He fel out of a tre perch and the shooting died down for a spel. At the same time, two other Japs edged up on me, but Brownie shot 'em.

"It's hard to say how many we knocked off. We had to fire at sound because you couldn't see the snipers for the camouflage.

Started Back Again

"It was after we thought al lthe Jap snipers were cleaned out that the lieutenant ordered me back down the hill. Machine gun slugs hit al laround me, but they didn't tag me. Back at the line I got hold of some more amunition and we started up again.

"If I broke my promise to Lucille, just tell her I had nothing to do with it, will you, buddy?"

His wife lives with their 6-year-old daughter at the Arlington, Va., address.

Chicubs Drop Flock to 4th; Score, 5 to 3

Chicago, May 28 (AP).—Paul Derringer dumped the Brooklyn Dodgers into fourth place today by hurling the Chicago Cubs to a 5-to-3 victory over Rookie Ray Hathaway, making his first major league start. It was the sixth victory for the veteran right-hander.

The Brooklyn freshman yielded three runs in the first frame on two walks, an error, an outfield fly and Ed Sauer's single. With one gone, Frenchy Bordaray's wild throw gave Dan Johnson a life. Bill Nicholson and Phil Cavarretta singled, Len Rice scored Johnson with a fly to right, and Sauer batted home two with a one-baser to left.

Singles by Ed Stanky, Goody Rosen and Augie Galan and a double by Dixie Walker tied it up for the Dodgers in the third, but the Cubs took the lead in the fourth on successive hits by Stan Hack, JJohnson and Cavarretta.

Deringer's double followed by singles by Hack and Johnson chased Hathaway in the sixth and ended the scoring.

Pirates Beat Giants, 11-5, In Suspended Game

Pittsburgh, May 28 (AP).—Pittsburgh completed yesterday's suspended game with an 11-5 victory over the New York Giants today but the regularly scheduled contest was postponed with the pirates leading, 2-0, at the end of the fourth inning.

Nick Strincevich was shutting out the Giants with three hits when the rains came. After waiting 30 minutes the umpires found the grounds too wet for play and ordered a postponement. The game will be played as part of a double-header July 18.

The two Pittsburgh scores, automatically washed off the books, came off Van Mungo in the third on Nick Strincevich's single, Jack Barrett's one-baser followed by a stolen base, passed ball and a single by Bob Elliott.

Before the regular game, the tilt suspended yesterday in the eighth inning with Pittsburgh leading 10-5, was picked up. The Bucs scored another run in the eighth and the Giants in the ninth to put the win into the standings.

Yesterday's game was called because of the Sunday law and became "suspended" under the National League rules and had to be completed.

Bosox's Bowman Sold to Cincinnati

Boston, May 28 (AP).—The Boston Red Sox reduced its roster to the 25-player limit tonight by selling righthand pitcher Joe Bowman to the Cincinnati Reds for the waiver price.

Bowman, who spent from 1934 to 1941 in the National League with the Giants, Phillies and Pirates, became a Red Sox farmhand with the Louisville Colonels in 1943 and was called up by the parent club last season. The 34-year-old flinger had a 12-8 record with the Red Sox last season but has been charged with defeats in his two 1945 starts.

Western Nine Scores in 7th To Win, 1-0

Western High's Red Raiders, depions, took undisputed possession fending Interhigh League champ of fourth place in the league standings and gained a playoff berth by defeating Wilson's Green Tigers, 1-0, yesterday at Wilson stadium.

The contest was a special playoff to decide the fourth place team as both the Raiders and Tigers were deadlocked for that position with three victories and three defeats each. By losing, Wilson was eliminated from the playoffs.

The game was highlighted by a pitching duel between Western's Gene Gould, 1944 all-high hurler, and Rufus Webb, Wilson star. Both boys turned in three-hitters and showed fine control throughout as they each walked but two men.

It wasn't until the seventh that Western got to Webb for its lone run. Burt Meyer started the frame by reaching first on Shortstop Rem Lane's error. Dick Taylor got on by a fielder's choice that nipped Meyer at second. Jack Castro then hit to Lane to make his second error of the inning and Nick Chanaka followed with a single to drive in Taylor.

Closest the Green Tigers came to scoring was in the sixth when they loaded the bases, but Stan (Bucky) Harris lined out to Taylor to end the frame. Western failed to produce a run in the fourth when Bill Cavanautge led off the inning with a triple only to see the Raiders go down in order after that.

More interhigh action is on hand today with two playoffs of rained out games earlier in the season slated. Coolidge faces Anacostia at Anacostia, and Eastern meets Tech at Tech. The Colts and Ramblers are currently tied for the league lead.

Holmes' .402 Paces Majors; Cuccinello's .333 Leads A. L.

Braves' Star Leads Ott by 21 Points

New York, May 28 (AP).—Tommy Holmes of the Boston Braves was the only .400 hitter in the major leagues today, setting the pace in the National League for the third successive week with a .402 average.

Holmes dropped off 24 points from last week's pace but runner-up Manager Mel Ott of the New York Giants also slipped, leaving the Boston outfielder out from by 21 degrees. Ott was hitting .381 in averages including Sunday's games and Nap Reyes, his third sacker, had zoomed into a third-place tie with Whitey Kurowski of St. Louis at .368. The Gnonts' Cuban infielder picked up 21 points in moving from seventh to third.

Other top flight hitters were Goody Rosen, Brooklyn, .360; Luis Olmo, Brooklyn, .353; Tommy O'Brien, Pittsburgh, .337; Phil Cavarretta, Chicago, and Carden Gillenwater, Boston, 336 and Ernie Lombardi, New York, .330.

Tony Keeps Lead Despite Big Drop

Chicago, May 28 (AP).—The leveling off process continued in the American League hitting race last week, but pace-setter Tony Cuccinello of the Chicago White Sox clung to the lead despite a 23-point slump to .333.

Batting star of the week was George Stirnweiss of the New York Yankees, who collected 12 hits in 32 appearances to climb 20 points to .319, three points behind teammate Nick Etten, who took over third spot with .322.

Stirnweiss also dominated the specialized department, taking the lead in hits with 38, in thre-baggers with 4 and in runs with 27.

Other batting leaders, according to official statistics computed through Sunday's games, included Mike Tresh of the White Sox, .300; Skeeter Newsome of Boston and Ed Mayo of Detroit, .299; Mike Kreevich of St. Louis, .224; and Don Ross of Cleveland, .293.

Keomuka to Meet Hanneger on Mat

Promoter Joe Turner last night closed out a match between Duke Keomuka and Pat Hanneger, the New York mat expert, to complete the card for tomorrow night's wrestling show at the 14th and W sts. arena.

Keomuka, a member of the U. S. Merchant Marine, has been grappling here for several years and is a favorite among local wrestling fans. A consistent winner, he meets a formidable opponent in Henneger.

Pitcher Gets No-Hitter As Mates Rally to Win

Memphis, Tenn., May 28 (AP).—Pitcher Don Dunker of the Naval Air Center baseball team, hurled a no-hitter here yesterday but his mates had to stage a 2-run rally in the ninth inning to give him a 4-3 victory.

Selmon Field of Monroe, La., scored three times in the first inning, on errors by Dunker's team.

Yanks' Phil Rizzuto Says He's 'Muscle Stiff'

Phillip Francis Rizzuto was a top-flight shortstop with the New York Yankees in civilian life, but in a recent Southwest Pacific softball contest he ruefully admitted he qualified only as a "muscle-stiff" player.

Rizzuto, athletic specialist second class, who sprang to major league fame from the Kansas City Blues, led a team ashore from his auxiliary cargo ship to help the Twenty-second Special Naval Construction Battalion celebrate a year's duty overseas.

The Seabeege won.

"Softball is a different game," the Navy report of the proceedings quoted Rizzuto. "I've been through a lot of baseball, but after two days of softball I'm stiff as a board."

Pete Gray Is Okinawa Marines' Main Topic

By Sergt. Harold E. Foreman
Marine Combat Correspondent and former United Press Staff Correspondent.

Okinawa (Delayed) (U.P.).—With ears cocked for "Washing Machine Charlie" (Jap bomber), the baseball season opened on this bloody island a few hours before it did in the United States.

The quality of play wasn't too much, there was only one ball, rocks served as bags and the bat was a redecorated axe handle.

Booming artillery and naval fire supplanted the cheers of crowds—but it was baseball and the Marines had a helluva time.

It started on a quite day in the sector of the First Marine Regiment and the men were restless. Talking was all there was to do and, as usual, baseball cropped up in the conversation. Somebody suggested that a nearby former parade ground would make a swell diamond. Somebody else remarked that one of the fellows in his company had a new ball. Brother, that was all those Marines needed to hear.

The one Marine went after his buddy and the ball. Two others headed for the Colonel's Post and came back with permission to play. Another came up with the axe handle, wrapping the handle with paper and twine so it could be fimly gripped, and from somewhere appeared two gloves, one for the catcher and the other for the first baseman.

Teams were chosen and the game was on. "Washington Machine Charlie" failed to appear and the game was played to a successful conclusion.

Further proof of the Marine love of baseball came when the opening major league scores were posted on the regimental bulletin board. One-armed Pete Gray, the St. Louis Browns' outfielder, was the main topic. The men wondered whether he was in the lineup and whether he got a hit. Some of them never will know.

But major league owners and fans can rest assured that men of the First Marine Regiment want baseball to continue. It will on Okinawa—as long as that one ball holds together.

Town Hall Takes Charles Town Inaugural

By Walter Haight
Post Staff Writer

Charles Town, W. Va., May 28.—Coming through with a bold stretch drive, G. C. Smith's Town Hall was the winner of the Inaugural Handicap feature race of the opening day program of the Charles Town Jockey Club. The judges called for a photo of the finish but the 6-year-old took the decision by a good neck margin from Spikery, owned by Mrs. M. E. (Liz) Whitney. Two lengths farther back came J. E. Crider's Comedy Player to be third in a field of eight.

Town Hall, a frequent winner here in past years, was making his second start of the season. Despite his failure in an outing at Pimlico, the son of Mirafel was installed the favorite and those in a crowd of 4000 who bet the right way were satisfied to collect a $4 mutuel. Jockey Woodrow Kirk, of the Silver Spring Kirks, was aboard the winner who was clocked in 1.23 4-5 for the Charles Town course of 120 feet more than six furlongs.

Track is Heavy

While conditions were ideal overhead, the track was in rather rugged shape. It was heavy as the card began and was drying out in spots by the time the feature was contested.

Town Hall was allowed to settle into best stride going to the clubhouse turn as Handles Queen and Spikery battled for the lead. Kirk escaped some crowding that marked the turn, while Randles Queen opened a god advantage over Spikery.

Along the back stretch, Town Hal began his move and gradually gained on the leaders. Randles Queen finally weakened and Spikery held on. However, in the stretch Kirk worked on Town Hall and the big fellow went on to collar Spikery going into the wire, to win while opening a gap.

Arch McDonald Scores

The day's second best offering, a purse event in the seventh position, went to J. E. Crider's Arch McDonold. Despite the name, the 4-year-old gelding got home three parts of a length in front of Wayne Kendrick's Panaca, with Enrico Rinaldi's Flower Battle third in the test of 4½ furlongs. The son of Strolling Player paid $28.80 and was clocked in 0:52 4-5.

The first day daily double brought a healthy pay-off of $441. The Flamingo Farms' Exploit won the first race at $12.80 and L. Seay's Shley Ann took the second at $24.40.

BETWEEN RACES—As reported, Royal Business, the grand old mare who was the "queen of Charles Town" wasn't here for the opening. . . . She is going to raise a family. . . . Capt. Ewart Johnston, her owner, says she is on the farm and bred to Double Scotch. . . . If the youngster is a colt maybe he will name it Monkey Business. . . . Jockey Willie Kelley, who has exchanged his overseas ribbons for riding silks, will be back in the saddle tomorrow. Alan Clarke was up looking for stalls for Walter Haight, the horse, and others. . . . The stable area is full and he's on the waiting list. . . . Norris Royden is again in the stewards' stand here along with T. C. Bradley and W. B. Watkins. . . . Jockey Patsy Grant was lucky when Pharamint fell with him in the stretch. . . He waved the ambulance away and continued to ride his mounts. . . . The horse broke a leg and was destroyed. . . . Jockey Sammy Palumbo served notice that he is in top form by riding the first winner of the day and meeting aboard the Washington owned Flamingo Farms Exploit, a horse that broke a lot of people last year. . . . An aptly named horse is Apple A Day by the sire Dr. Freeland. . . I was a radio holdout today. . . . Must be the baseball influence.

Foe for Banks To Round Out Monday Card

A suitable opponent for Billy Banks, popular local negro lightweight, to round out his all-star card Monday night at Griffith Stadium, today is being sought by Gabe Menendez, matchmaker for Promoter Joe Turner.

Featuring the card is the 10 round scrap between Bee Bee Washington, outstanding local middleweight, and Frankie Terry, the "Battling Fireman from Brooklyn," who has a win and a draw with Rocky Graziano in the last eight months. The 10-round supplementary feature brings together Frankie Wills, local welterweight champion who is making a strong comeback, against Georgie Williams, sharpshooting Baltimore welter flash.

A first class opponent for Banks, who has won six of his last seven bouts in his own comeback venture, would round out one of the best balanced cards of the summer season.

Washington, it was divulged yesterday, will step directly to the head of the line for a bout in August with Rocky Graziano should he get over Terry. The Brooklyn Italian, who is a main event Madison Square Garden fighter, also put in his bid for a third Graziano match, informing the Turner-Menendez firm he would take on Rocky here in August should he whip Bee Bee here Monday. Mike Jacobs is understood to be interested in a Bee Bee-Graziano bout for New York in the event of a Washington victory, but "Bo" Bregman, director of Washington's destinies, recently informed Menendez the local firm would get first call on the match.

Wills, also, must get over the cute Williams to further enhance his earning powers. Frankie has been promised a bout on the annual Richmond Police Benefit card, June 21, should he whip Williams. The Richmond booking is a lucrative one and it doesn't stand to reason WWIis wants to miss the shot and is working himself into A-1 shape for this test.

2 Disqualified, Some Man Gets Downs Purse

Louisville, Ky., May 28 (AP).—The second disqualification of the day marked the running of the Buechel Purse, today's feature race at Churchill Downs, as Mrs. K. Maxwell's Busyridge was set back and C. R. Valentine's Some Man was given first money.

Previously Bozie was disqualified in favor of Kadelkee in the second race.

Busyridge came from behind to gain a narrow decision but the stewarts ruled he interferred with Some Man. Second money automatically went to Marchon and third to B. J. Bax's Sigma Kappa, the favorite.

Second choice in the betting in the field of seevn, Some Man rewarded at $5.20 as he covered the 6½ furlongs in 1:20 1-5.

For his infraction, Jockey Willie Garner on Busyridge was suspended for the remainder of the meeting. Arthur Fischer, apprentice astride Bozie, drew 30 days.

Beating the threat of RUBBER DOLLARS

While in Chungking, making a study of the Chinese inflation problem, Leon Henderson, former OPA administrator, heard he could buy silk stockings, and searched for a pair. He finally was offered a pair of rayons for $32 American money. He examined them, and the ex-OPA boss found a stamp: "OPA Ceiling Price, 95 cents."

...From Leonard Lyons' column

But for the OPA, that's what we'd be up against today in this country . . . the same type of runaway inflation as in China, France, or Mexico . . . the same type of runaway inflation that we ourselves suffered in every war from the Revolution down through World War I.

Of course many prices have risen. Many goods are hard to get, and quality isn't what it was. But for all this, the price level as a whole is about where it was in 1929, and nobody despaired of the value of the dollar in those days.

Today an American dollar is still a dollar and not a cheap form of wallpaper. For that we may give thanks that we have the OPA.

Despite all this, the OPA has been attacked by a small handful of men.

Fortunately, this handful does not speak for the businessmen of America. Businessmen know that the mistakes of OPA have been many, but far fewer than anyone had a right to expect. They know that a big job of work has been done . . . and done exceedingly well . . . in the emergency of war.

But it is in the year that lies ahead of us that we face the acid test. The war with Germany has ground to a stop. Many people have fallen into the comfortable belief that the threat of inflation is past and the need for price control is just about over. No more dangerous error could be made.

We cannot forget that almost half of the World War I inflation took place after the Armistice, after the shooting stopped, and after the wartime controls were scrapped. It was the inflation after the Armistice that set the stage for the paralyzing deflation, the bankruptcy, the unemployment, and the ruin of 1920 and 1921.

If we permit price control to break down through public apathy or through surrender to the selfish few, we shall be repeating the tragic blunder of 1919. We shall be throwing away all the economic gains we have won with so much strain and effort. We shall be preparing an economy ruined by inflation to greet our boys when they come back from overseas.

In our own company we know that price control is no bed of roses. We don't enjoy, any more than the next fellow, the questionnaires, the reports, the irksome regulation of every step of our business. But we keep remembering what happened in the last war. We know what will happen this time if prices get out of hand. If that happens, it will mean, not petty annoyances, not inconveniences . . . it will mean ruin . . . ruin for business, ruin for everyone.

That's why we wholeheartedly support the President when he asks for an end to "irresponsible criticism" of this "essential wartime program and hard-working wartime agency." We believe the American people and particularly the businessmen of this Nation will now say to the OPA:

"Hold that line! We'll back your attack on inflation . . . to the finish!"

Corens Draws Top Sentence Of 18 Years, Blast From Judge

Annapolis, Md., May 26 (AP).—Henry H. Corens, 44-year-old Bethesda automobile painter, was taken to the Maryland State Penitentiary yesterday after he was sentenced by Circuit Court Judge Clark to 18 years imprisonment for slaying and beheading his wife.

The sentence, imposing the maximum penalty for a second degree murder conviction returned by an Ane Arundel County Circuit Court jury last Saturday after six hours of deliberation, followed the withdrawal of a motion for a new trial by Defense Attorneys George Woelfel and Harold C. Smith.

The State, in its closing arguments, demanded "the highest type of conviction known to the law"—first degree murderr—for Corens, whose wife, Pearl, a 31-year-old War Department employe, was reported missing last February 12. Her severed head was found in Fairfax County, Va., February 27, but her body has never been discovered.

"Diabolical Murder," Judge Says

When the head was found, the State charged Corens with slaying his wife and sawing off her head with a hacksaw. Fours dentists placed on the witnes stand by the prosecution identified the head as that of Mrs. Corens.

"I don't know how you killed her, but that you killed her is as certain as though witnesses had been there to see you bludgeon and choke the life outof her," Judge Clarke said in pronouncing the sentence.

Thecrime, he continued, "is one of the most diabolical murders that ever blackened the pages of Maryland jurisprudence. . . . I am going to give you all the punishment I can give you. The balance I leave to God and your conscience."

Before the sentencing, Defense Attorney Smith pleaded for leniency. After sentence was pronounced, defense counsel indicated they would seek an appeal.

Corens, who insisted he was innocent throughout the four-day trial, collapsed in his chair after Judge Clarke had spoken. He covered his face with his hands and wept.

Defense Attacks Evidence

The case went to the jury at 5:30 p. m. Saturday after Montgomery County State's Attorney Joseph B. Simpson told the jury Corens testimony that he had been "framed," that human tissue on a hacksaw stemmed from a callous his wife had cut from her foot, and thathuman blood in the basement of his home came from a wounded finger was a "tissue of lies."

Corens' attorney demanded acquittal on the ground that the circumstantial evidence presented against Corens was insufficient and that there was no positive proof of the death of Mrs. Corens'

However, when the verdict of second degree murder was returned, the defense asked for a postponement of the sentence until after a hearing on a new trial. The hearing was scheduled for 1 p. m. today, but the request was withdrawn by Woelfel.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Woman Calls Husband a Scoundrel; Says He Has Made Two Attempts on Her Life; Now She Asks, Is It Sensible to Flee?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: At the time we married, I adored my husband. But his dishonesty and unkindness have killed my love. Nowadays I despise him and can hardly stand his presence. He is a sly, secretive person with a well-earned reputation of being a scoundrel. In connivance with another woman he has planned my death.

Once he tried to poison me and another time he tried to smother me to death. That may sound like fiction but it is God's truth. I wouldn't go to the police for anything in the world, but common sense tells me to get away. Don't you agree? O. B.

Pure Folly To Stay On

DEAR O. B.: Well, for heaven's sake, yes, I urgently agree you should get away from a man who plots your death and has twice tried to kill you. The fact that you stay on passively, in fear of your life and despising the rascal, makes you seem almost crazy as he is crooked. Don't talk about "common sense" again, until you have surrounded yourself with some margin of safety.

Why don't you report the situation to police? Are you afraid your husband might murder boldly for revenge, if his attempted crimes were exposed? If you believe police investigation would increase your personal danger, then turn to the Legal Aid Bureau or to the prosecuting attorney's office or to a private attorney for confidential advice on how to protect yourself,—which means, how to escape his clutches and cover your tracks without waiving your legal rights. M. H.

Should Wife Send Gift to Old Beau?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: All during high school, I had one beau, a popular athlete, who received a great deal of local and State-wide publicity. He gave me all the clippings and I kept a scrapbook, which we thought would be "ours" one day. But for three years now, I have been happily married to someone else and I am seriously thinking of returning the clippings to him, arranged as a gift in a new scrapbook.

He is still single but plans to marry some day and I think he would like to have these clippings. I plan to keep all the other things he gave me and Emily Post might say: "Keep everything." But don't you think I might stretch a point on the scrapbook? Please advise. C. D.

Take Care Not To Hurt Husband

DEAR C. D.: After three years' marriage to somebody else, it is decidedly late in the day to be returning souvenirs to a former sweetheart. Anything he had given you, of permanent cash value or special interest to him, properly should have been restored when you parted company; and certainly before you became Mrs. John Doe.

It would smack of coquetry and be in bad taste to send the young man the clippings dressed up as a gift at this late date. The gesture might well make your husband wince; and it is not a thing to do without his knowledge. Mail the clippings, just as they are, to the young man's mother, along with a note which says, in effect: "These turned up in the spring house cleaning and we though you might like to have them." M. H.

How to Give Good Party

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: We are a group of girls, 15 years old, planning a party to which we are inviting boys between the ages of 15 and 17. They like to have lots of fun, but not in a quiet way; yet not in a rough way, either. Can you suggest a program to make the party a success? It will probably break up around 1:30 a. m. They all dance, but we can't "cut a rug" all evening; and we don't want anything childish, like a treasure hunt. J. G.

DEAR J. G.: Too much entertainment, even the best, turns into a bore and headache; so play safe by planning to sign off at midnight, which is plenty late enough for any informal party, whether for youth or adults. If the fun is still going strong at that hour, let it run on its own momentum until the chaperones shoo guests out; but don't try to whoop things up after midnight. For something to do, in addition to dancing, have a good fortune teller and a food bar doing business all evening. M. H.

The Gentler Sex

Design for Tomorrow

I

My days are full of ragged ends,
And tasks that are suspended,
But I'll get around to everything
Once this war is ended.

II

I'll clean the basement, attic too,
Every window, every curtain,
(Perhaps I can get help by then,
Though it's not so very certain.)

III

The desks and chests with bulging drawers,
The trunks, the piles of clippings,
I'll go through very carefully,
Leave behind no useless drippings.

IV

And everything shall be repaired,
Or replaced with a postwar wonder,
I'll start a long-time wardrobe plan,
In which there'll be no sartorial blunder.

V

Then I must keep my promises
To serve on a dozen club committees,
And to join everything that meets
To save mankind or sing ditties.

VI

I'll hold reunion with old friends,
A million is their number,
To whom I'm pledged to be a chum,
When war ceases to encumber.

VII

I must take to dinner or to lunch,
Those to whom I owe calor-ees
Perhaps I can handle them easier
At a series of large teas.

VIII

I will answer all the urgent notes
To which I've never gotten around,
And make a tour of relatives,
Where complaints of neglect resound.

IX

I'll start my exercises, too,
They're all clipped out of the papers,
Just waiting till I have more time
To devote to such extra capers.

X

Also, there is the pile of books
Everyone but me has read,
And magazines with food for thought,
In heaps beside my bed.

XI

Sometimes I feel appalled at how
Of time ahead I borrow,
Much as I want this war to cease,
I somewhat fear tomorrow.

Town Talk—

Once a Texan—Always a Lonestar Stater; Mary Clark Kept the Good News to Herself

By Elizabeth Churchill

HONEY, when a bunch of Texans get together there just ain't any other State. When I find myself the lonestar Yankee amongst them I feel it's necessary to drop the remark that my grandma was an early settler of Texas. That's how it was the other afternoon when Mr. and Mrs. William P. MacCracken invited a handful of Texans in to meet Mrs. Charley Schuler and Mrs. Wilber Crawford, both visitors from Waco.

New Attorney General Tom Clark and Mary Clark couldn't get further than the door. Everyone rushed up to congratulate them. Tom said it was the biggest surprise of his life.

"Mat Connelly called me up," he said, "and told me to come to the White House and to be sure to come in the back door. The President chatted with me a few minutes, then said he'd like me to be Attorney General and if I needed any help to let him know."

"That was all there was to it," continued Tom.

Mary Clark was beaming like a little girl with a brand-new doll. I had seen her at lunch on that fateful day, and she told me Tom had just called her a few minutes before. "I was simply BUSTING to tell everyone because they were all discussing Cabinet changes."

Gen. Ira Eaker was greeting new and old friends with Mrs. Eaker and telling all he was so disappointed that he wouldn't be able to personally take a crack at the Japs because he is here now as Assistant Chief of Staff. They've moved from D. C. to a house at Fort Myer and Ruth is inviting friends to come out and rock in the hickory rockers on the front porch.

Representative from Texas, Fritz Lanham, and Mrs. Lanham, were there without tricks. Fritz is a magician by hobby, and he's president of the American Magician Society. He's working at present on a new trick whereby he can pull a steak out of a silk hat. Wonder where he's going to get the hat!

WHAT this town is going to do without rumors I don't know. But with President Truman at the helm, no one has any idea what his next move will be. A week ago Harry Hopkins had had a long talk with the President when it was decided Harry would retire from political activities and would go off the White House payroll. I was sitting down at my typewriter typing out the story while the radio played a background. I suddenly sat up and took notice. Harry Hopkins was off to Moscow! Out went a good story.

Mrs. Hopkins went along with her husband and perhaps her training and experience as a nurse's aide will be of great help to her husband as it is no secret that he's a sick man.

Joe Davies had also expected to retire from the scene. Not so long ago he spent six weeks in the hospital and on the advice of his doctors he'd made up his mind to take it easy. But the critical state of the world gives no respite to these two men.

Peabody–Janacopulos Nuptials Read in St. Thomas Church

St. Thomas Church was the scene yesterday at high noon of the marriage of Miss Josette Janacopulos, daughter of Mme. Adrienne Janacopulous, Paris and Rio de Janeiro, to Lieut. (j. g.) William J. Peabody, USNR, son of Mrs. Phelps Crosby, Washington, and Richard Rogers Peabody, Boston. The Rev. Howard S. Wilkinson performed the ceremony.

The bride wore a white crepe de chine frock, with a white hat and carried a bouquet of gardenias flown from the Alabama estate of Mrs. Edward Stone for the occasion, and which were also used to decorate the church.

The matron of honor was Mrs. James Parks and her husband, Lieutenant Parks, USNR, was best man.

After the ceremony a wedding breakfast for intimate friends and family was held at the home of the bridegroom's mother.

The bride, who flew from Rio de Janeiro last week on receiving news of Lieutenant Peabody's leave, received her schooling in Paris, and has been living recently in Rio, where her mother, a noted sculptress, is working on a government project.

The bridegroom was graduated from Lenox School, Lenox, Mass., and Williams College. Before enlisting in the Navy he was with the American Airlines, New York. He is a grandson of Mrs. William H. Jacob, New York, and of Col. J. C. R. Peabody, Hamilton, Mass. His sister is Countess Albert de Mun, the former Polly Peabody, who was married in London last spring, and his mother is the owner of the Caresse Crosby Gallery here.

He is her son by her first marriage, after which she married the late Henry Grew Crosby, cousin of Joseph Grew, Undersecretary of State. Lieutenant Peabody has just returned from 25 months' duty overseas and will be stationed in Washington.

The couple have left for a wedding trip to New York, and on their return Mrs. Crosby will present them to her friends at a large reception which the brief notice of her son's leave did not permit yesterday.

(Will bulges and edge-lines show when "those days of the month" arrive?)

PERISH the thought that "those days of the month" should ever cross your mind when you're selecting a smoothly fitted dress!
